

BEER STARTS BOOM IN TRADE

ROOSEVELT ASKS 9 NATIONS INTO TRADE PARLEY

Seeks Informal Talk with Leaders.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(Special.)—In the hope of cutting through months of diplomatic frills, President Roosevelt has caused invitations to be sent to nine principal nations asking that their governmental leaders come to discuss informally with him the economic future of the world.

The President hopes, by sitting down in friendly fashion and talking things over with the foreign representatives, to settle in large part the major economic problems which will come before the world conference this summer. By talking them over in advance, Mr. Roosevelt believes, the chances of material success in the conference will be greatly enhanced, and the necessity for having large and unwieldy committees debate for months over such issues will be obviated.

Transmitted Through Envoys.

Seven of the nine invitations issued by the state department were transmitted today through the foreign ambassadors at Washington, the bids going to Chancellor Hitler of Germany, Premier Mussolini of Italy, and the heads of state of China, Japan, Argentina, Brazil and Chile.

Mussolini is expected to accept. Hitler, it is thought, will depend upon his ambassador to act for him, or will send a special representative.

Prime Minister MacDonald of England previously had been invited, has accepted, and will inaugurate these significant conversations on April 23.

Can Send Representatives.

Several days ago Premier Edouard Daladier of France was advised by the French embassy in Washington that he would be happy to receive him, but he probably will send a representative, possibly former Premier Edouard Herriot or Joseph Paul-Boncour, foreign minister.

While the invitations run to the heads of the governments, they were worded so that the foreign powers may, if they choose, send another high representative of their states, or the exchange of opinion may be made through the regular diplomatic channels.

The conferences with the representatives of the various powers are to be conducted as a series of distinct meetings.

It has been a rule of the state department, sedulously adhered to, that the debt agreements made by the United States with the several foreign nations were separate, each to be discussed singly with the interested nation alone, and not to be lumped into a common topic for consideration at a group gathering.

Will Not Hear Chorus From Abroad.

This same policy is to be observed in the coming discussions. The President will greet and talk with his guests one by one; but he and his representatives will join in no mass meeting where their voices might be drowned out by the chorus from abroad.

President Roosevelt emphasized the point that the conversations he expects to hold in conjunction with Secretary of State Hull will not be general.

There will be no round table discussion. As the President put it, the meetings will be wholly informal, all with the thought of reaching a measure of accord in advance of the world conference.

It was denied at both the White House and state department that the war debts owed to the United States will come under discussion, but it is considered inconceivable that they must be dealt with, along with the other economic issues.

Break Down Trade Barriers.

The administration's chief aim, however, will be toward the breaking down of trade barriers, high tariff walls, so that the flow of international commerce, held as the base of most of the world life, may be resumed.

One of the motives inspiring the sending of invitations to the foreign powers, it was stated, is to let a feeling go abroad to the general public of this country and foreign countries that the world leaders are intent upon making real progress at the coming world conference, and that they have confidence that a program will result which will bring on a world "new deal."

MacDonald in Threefold Capacity.

Prime Minister MacDonald in leading off the conversation will come in a threefold capacity, as head of the British government, as president of the forthcoming economic conference which is to be held in London and as

LAST MOMENTS ON AKRON TOLD BY SURVIVORS

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(Special.)—Three men in navy blue sat in comfortable chairs in the house naval affairs committee room today and in quiet voices told how but a few hours before they had floundered hopelessly in the dark waters into which their crashing airship had cast them.

Through the windows as they told their graphic stories they looked at a blue horizon into which next Thursday morning at sunrise one of them, and perhaps all of them, will sail aboard a new giant airship on its first test flight.

The three were Commander Herbert V. Wiley, Richard E. Deal, and Moody E. Erwin, survivors of the crash which sent the dirigible Akron plunging into the Atlantic with a loss of 72 lives. Summoned as first witnesses in the committee's investigation of the disaster, they told tense, vivid stories of their almost miraculous escape and rescue by the German tanker Phoebe.

Wiley to Ride Macon.

But the three by choice are not yet done with airships. For Commander Wiley has been named to the official inspection board which will ride the navy's giant new airship Macon when it goes aloft for a first trial flight at sunrise next Thursday, weather permitting.

And it may be that his fellow survivors will be with him as members of the crew. Both, it was learned, have requested berths on the Akron's sister ship and are considered likely to get them, though perhaps not in time for the trial flight.

Commander Wiley read to the committee the report he had already submitted to the navy department and which has been made public.

Recites Moffett's Words.

It was Deal who in the course of his testimony repeated the last known words of Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, navy chief of aeronautics who went to his death in a gangway shortly after the takeoff from Lakehurst. Enlisted Man Deal met the admiral and wished him "Good evening."

"He proceeded to the wardroom," Deal told the committee, "coming back about 8:25 headed for the control car or the officers' quarters. He asked me if I was on watch and I replied, 'Yes, I had the telephone at this station. He stopped for a moment on the first step leading down the gangway and I said, 'Admiral, you must like flying on this ship.'"

"He replied, 'I'm very fond of it, much more so than the others,' meaning the heavier than air, I assumed. He said that he thought it much better than the Shenandoah. When I replied 'Yes, sir,' he proceeded to the control car."

Sees Girders Give Way.

Deal told of the electrical storm, of going off watch, and continued: "I lay down on my bunk on the outer keel with my head on my hand, resting on my elbow. I happened to be looking up and noticed the number 7 cell was swishing quite more than usual. While looking at this cell the ship gave a terrific lurch sideways, and longitudinal girders 7 and 8 gave way, as well as some of the wires."

Ship Starts Down.

"I had my feet in the keel and the ship started down by the tail. "My first thought was to get a pair of side cutters to slip the fuel tanks aft, but while thinking of this I noticed the control wires got through the sheaves, and looking forward at another noise noticed the tank at 147 drop from her forward suspension. At this time the ship had reached a very sharp inclination, so much so that I had to reach for the side girders to hold myself up."

"The ship was falling quite rapidly now and I knew she was to crash. About five or ten seconds before she crashed the lights went out in the keel. I retained my stand on the keel and then heard a noise aft. And then the water hit my feet. A gas line tank or something hit me under the water and I started to go through the motions of swimming, but my right leg was caught in a girder or wire and I pulled on it. And then, after quite a spell, I came to the surface."

"I heard men crying for help and saw a couple of men float by me. The little boy, Carl, had gone out to the garage. I found him there, choked him, and tied a cord around his neck. Then I saw I wanted to kill. "Then I saw the baby in the house. I thought it might be a long time before any one came, so I put the baby

Slays 3, Sent to Prison 27 Hours Later

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 7.—(Special.)—Henry B. Bedford, 43 year old grade school principal, ordained minister and former local Sunday school superintendent, this afternoon was sentenced to life imprisonment at Marquette, the Michigan branch prison, for the murder of Mrs. Maggie Sue Bengert, 28, and her two children, Carl Jr., 8, and Thebert, 3 months.

He was sentenced just twenty-seven hours after the commission of the crime in his home, where the Bengert family lived and where, before two hours had elapsed, the husband and father arrived for an expected reunion and reconciliation to find his wife and children slain.

"It is unnecessary for me to remind you," Judge Thaddeus D. Taylor of Grand Rapids Superior court said, "You will have ample opportunity in the days to come to reflect upon the atrocity of your crime."

Gets Maximum Sentence.

Bedford stood motionless with bowed head, hands clasped behind his back, as Judge Taylor, for murder in the first degree, sentenced him "to solitary confinement, at hard labor, for life."

It is the maximum sentence under Michigan law.

After he was sentenced, Bedford asked Judge Taylor whether he would be permitted to take his books and typewriter with him to prison.

"I don't want to waste the rest of my life," he said. "I hope that in prison work can be found for me that will be of some service to others."

Bedford, who told reporters yesterday that he had no knowledge of the crime and that "everything went black" when he drank a glass of milk into which "some one had put something," confessed this morning to Prosecuting Attorney Bartel J. Jonkman.

Quarreled Over Love Affair.

"I am a Christian," he said, "and I loved Mrs. Bengert. There was nothing wrong between us. I hoped to marry her honorably if she would divorce her husband."

Mrs. Bengert, he said, had agreed to a divorce, then had changed her mind. Finally she had promised, in any event, to remain as his housekeeper. But yesterday noon she changed her mind again and told him she was going to leave, though not to return to her husband.

"When she told me she was going to leave," he said, "we quarreled. I followed her upstairs and in a frenzy threw her on the bed and choked her with my hands until she was quiet. Then I tied a cord around her neck. The little boy, Carl, had gone out to the garage. I found him there, choked him, and tied a cord around his neck. Then I saw I wanted to kill. TAUGHT IN FOREST PARK.

Henry B. Bedford, school official recalled yesterday, was superintendent of schools in Forest Park from July, 1921, to June, 1932. Previous to his employment there he had taught in St. Charles, Aurora, and Plainfield. William Ernst, a member of the Forest Park school board, said yesterday that Bedford was asked to resign because he was not qualified for the position.

Average Alcohol Content of Beer 3.001, Tests Show

New York, April 7.—(AP)—Herbert Schwartz, a chemist, put in the entire day today testing at random samples of beer from all the local breweries, and found that the average alcoholic content was 3.001 per cent. The brew ranged from 2.95 to 3.15 per cent, he said, and not one sample was over the legal 3.2.

Bomb Shakes Plant of Prima Brewing Co.

A bomb was exploded at the plant of the Prima Brewing company at 825 Blackhawk street early this morning, barely 24 hours after the brewery had sent out its first shipments of legalized 3.2 per cent beer. It was the first act of terrorism, perhaps by racketeers, in Chicago and probably in the nation directly associated with the new beer.

Police and officials of the company expressed themselves puzzled over the attack. Two theories are being investigated. One is that the bomb was the work of a disgruntled jobber who did not receive his supplies quickly enough. The other is that it was a warning by hoodlums against their being frozen out of the beer business by legal competition.

Causes $1,500 Damage.

The bomb did an estimated $1,500 damage to the plant and surrounding structures. It was placed, probably with a time fuse, in the doorway of a combination bottling works and storage house about 50 feet east of the main offices. No one was working there at the time of the explosion, although the rest of the brewery was operating full time.

Chief damage was done to the immediate area of the blast. An iron door was blown inward, stopping at the base of a large steel tank which had been used to store alcohol gathered in the de-alcoholization of near beer. The tank was empty at the time. The bombers might have intended to damage this tank, it was suggested.

Blast Shakes Entire Plant.

The entire plant was shaken by the blast and dozens of brewers, bottlers and others gathered at the scene. Among them were August Detman, night engineer, and Henry Mundt, watchman. The latter was 100 feet from the scene when the bomb went off, but saw no one running away. This convinced police the bomb was a time affair. Matthew Ernst, 3730 Lake Shore drive, chief engineer and a director of the company, was notified.

"We have had no threats nor any trouble with hoodlums or others," he said. "My guess is that a disgruntled jobber is responsible. There are a number of customers waiting to get half barrels of beer immediately after the beer became legal, but we served first the larger jobbers, figuring to reach a larger public that way. Some of these smaller jobbers were probably put out about it."

Lieut. Axel Hansen of the Hudson avenue station said other officials will be questioned today.

BANDITS HOLD UP KENNELS; STEAL 9 VALUABLE DOGS

Three robbers raided the Loring kennels at River road and Irving Park boulevard, Schiller Park, last evening and escaped with nine dogs valued at $1,500 after terrorizing a man and two women. Among the dogs taken were two champion Pekingese, Chuf Jaif Romance and Ki Chi Pao of Chufai.

Those held up were Alfred Lind, owner of the kennels, his wife Anna and their guest, Mrs. A. Murray of Boston, Mass. All were forced to lie on the floor of the Lind dining room while two of the men searched the dog pens and chose their loot.

According to Mrs. Lind, the two champions were by far the most valuable of the 150 dogs in the kennels. She said she believed the bandits were competent judges of Pekingese.

Pinchot Vetoes Bill for Dry Repeal Convention

Harrisburg, Pa., April 7.—(AP)—Gov. Pinchot today vetoed the bill which provided for a state convention to ratify repeal of the 18th amendment. The governor said the measure was not a fair bill.

Sees Shortage of Barley.

The one ominous note for the brewers was sounded by Joseph Dublin, editor of the Brewery Age, which note carried a cheering echo, however, for midwestern farmers.

The brewing industry, Mr. Dublin said, is threatened with a future shortage of barley malt. Production of barley suitable for brewing purposes totaled only 3,000,000 bushels in 1932, he pointed out, contrasting this figure with the 30,000,000 bushels of barley malt the industry used in 1917, the last year before prohibition.

Barley Prices Firm.

Virtually the entire malt barley production in the United States comes from Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas, whose acreage, Mr. Dublin said, would have to be trebled to meet prospective demand. While wheat, corn and oats prices were wab-

Brewers on 24 Hour Work Schedule.

Business statisticians were struggling through a maze of figures last night, striving to analyze the degree of stimulus that legal 3.2 per cent beer would provide to restore prosperity.

With the brewers, wholesalers, distributors, and retailers still totting to catch up with the public demand for beer that began at 12:01 a. m. yesterday, the business prophets confessed themselves at sea in their efforts to get an accurate computation of how much cash the first eighteen hours of legal beer sales had put back into circulation.

All interests were agreed, however, that the beer flood was carrying on its crest the greatest single day's outpouring of cash that Chicago business had experienced since the collapse of the stock market began to dry up public spending at the end of 1929.

Work 24 Hours a Day.

Most of the Chicago breweries, almost swamped under a deluge of orders, announced plans for continuing operations on a 24 hour basis indefinitely, necessitating the employment of double and triple shifts. The few that decided on a night shutdown explained that it was the exhaustion of their crews that impelled them to close.

A canvass of department stores, chain and independent groceries, and restaurants disclosed these retailers so rushed with trade that their bookkeepers had not found time to compute the profit. Many of them said they were handling the greatest rush of business since Armistice day of 1918.

The tide of the beer trade rushed on unabated last night, marked by the same orderly good cheer which signalized the first sales of the beverage during yesterday's early hours.

Forty Extra Employes on Job.

At the Bismarck hotel's Dutch room, which was closed at the time of the bank moratorium and reopened as a "bier stub," for new beer's eve, forty extra employes were put to work to handle the noon luncheon rush.

In the recently opened Tavern room at Mandel's department store the big staff of waitresses proved insufficient and the demand for beer was so insistent that store detectives were called to preserve order. The first round of beer in the Tavern room was "on the house."

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, National Tea stores, and Kroger-Consumer stores reported their shelves stripped of beer before noon. The sale of rye bread, pretzels, cheese and sausage was the biggest of any day in their history, executives of these chains said.

Sell Thousands of Cases.

The Stop and Shop, one of the biggest groceries in the country, had sold 1,900 cases of various brands of beer by mid-afternoon, and Hillman's, another big independent, sold 2,300 cases, their sales executives reported. Huge orders for delivery today were piling up last night, they said.

Several drug stores on the north side had a large trade in bottled beer during the evening. Some at times were crowded with purchasers taking home beer for those who were unable to go to beer dispensers in the early morning hours. One woman customer of a Rogers Park store complained that she was unable to buy a dose of quinine because all the clerks were engaged in handing out brew.

Barley Prices Firm.

Virtually the entire malt barley production in the United States comes from Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas, whose acreage, Mr. Dublin said, would have to be trebled to meet prospective demand. While wheat, corn and oats prices were wab-by on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday, barley was firm.

The milk industry, which has viewed the result of the misgivings, fearing that it might result in a curtailment of consumption of dairy products, discerned no appreciable slackening of demand on the first day of real beer, according to Chicago spokesmen.

M. O. Maughan, secretary of the Milk Council, Inc., representing the organized distributors of the city, said his organization surveyed the situation "with pleasant surprise."

"We had expected a sizable drop in demand," said Mr. Maughan. "Notwithstanding the large shipments of cases beer which were delivered to homes, there was no drop in the amount of home delivered beer. We did detect a slackening of orders for the hotel and restaurant, but it was not sufficient to cause any great anxiety."

Milk Deliveries Normal. Don N. Geyer, executive secretary of the Pure Milk association, representing the thousands of dairymen supplying the Chicago market, said the return of beer had no appreciable effect on his group.

"The first day of real beer does not provide a fair test," he said. "Our reports indicate that deliveries were practically normal. There seems to be nothing to fear, so far."

If beer should cut into milk sales, there were indications that the dairy men might win a corresponding gain on other dairy products, principally cheese.

One of the biggest cheese wholesalers in the city last night that demand for Swiss, brick and American cheese had been greater in the last week than in any month of the previous three years. Wholesale cheese prices were reported firm yesterday.

Dispute Over Beer's Kick. The controversy over the intoxicating properties of the new beer waxed hotter yesterday, with two important groups of drys at odds.

On the one side was Fred D. L. Squires, research secretary of the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation, who pronounced the new beverage "a mere froth, running as low as 2.5 per cent alcohol by weight."

"We had forty investigators out with ebullimeters," said Mr. Squires. "Up to 6 a. m. we had not found a single case which reached anywhere near the 2.2 per cent by weight limitation established by congress."

Brewers Deny Allegation. Brewers vehemently denied Mr. Squires' charges, asserting that the product came right up to the limitation of 2.2 per cent by weight and 4 per cent by volume established by congress. Denial by implication was also voiced by the Rev. George B. Safford, superintendent of the Illinois Anti-Saloon league.

Attended by his wife, Dr. Safford sallied forth from his Wilmette home shortly after midnight and observed but did not participate in the merriment. According to Dr. Safford's report, the hilarity surpassed that of a Roman orgy.

"Indications of drunkenness and semi-drunkenness were on every hand," he asserted. "I regarded the dull eye, the flushed face, the unsteady gait and incoherent talk on all sides."

On Madison street, my companion and I were pushed off the sidewalk. I saw one boy completely sozzled and loaded into a taxicab with directions to take him to a hospital."

Reeves Attacks Safford Story. Col. Ira L. Reeves, director of the Crusaders, young men's liberal organization, scoffed at Dr. Safford's report. He, too, had investigators out, visiting hotels, cafes, and even speak-easies, he said.

"I think the hotel managers deserve commendation for the way the celebration was conducted," he said. "They refrained from encouraging the sort of celebration which usually occurs on New Year's eve and worked effectively to discourage the hard liquor tippling which we have come to associate with prohibition."

"My investigators, who were out all night, saw one intoxicated man and he didn't get that way on beer. There was a bottle of bootleg gin protruding from his hip pocket."

"In his lurid report Dr. Safford is trying to build up propaganda to prove that the new beer is intoxicating in fact and endeavor by this means to have the Supreme court knock out a beverage which will do so much to restore sobriety."

Two Bone Dry Suburbs. Oak Park and Highland Park were the only bone dry suburbs around Chicago yesterday as the flood of legal 2.2 per cent beer swept over Cook county and the rest of the state. Conditions ranged from moist to soporific in other suburbs.

Mayor Emil B. Metzger of Highland Park invoked the town's ordinance of 1889 to prohibit sale, transportation, or even free distribution of the new beer. As a result Police Chief Edward Moroney arrested three truckmen, Casper Sant, Highland Park; Frank Ghartry, Highland Park; and Leo Diesterich, 2220 Elmwood avenue, Chicago, all of whom were filling orders for customers. They were released without bail and cited to appear on April 17 before Magistrate Herman Schwery for violation of a town ordinance.

Sell Beer in Lake Forest. While Mayor A. V. Farwell of Lake Forest said that village's charter was as stringent as Highland Park's, he declared the village merchants should not be deprived of the profits of the beer traffic. Under an ordinance can be drawn providing a $25 yearly license fee and a $1,000 orderly maintenance bond, merchants may deliver and restaurants may sell beer for immediate consumption without restrictions, Mayor Farwell ruled.

Oak Park police were instructed to prohibit both sales and transportation, but decided to withhold action until the village council meets today. Chief Benjamin Baransa had one distributor arrested, but later released him when the prisoner showed an inclination to file suit charging false arrest.

NOTES OF THE BEER RUSH

Between 2 o'clock and 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon it was a virtual impossibility to get a telephone connection with any of the large Chicago breweries. Each was called 20 times in the interval. Only one connection was completed, and that one was broken before the conversation was finished.

One-half of one per cent remains the legal status of beer in Zion City, stronghold of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, by action of the city council on Wednesday in a special session. An ordinance adopted at this meeting provided against the manufacture or sale within the city limits of any beverages containing more than "one-half of 1 per centum or more of alcohol by volume."

A girl at the entrance of a dime store passed out paper slips advertising banana splits for a dime. "You don't have beer?" asked disappointed customers. Receiving a negative reply, one woman said: "Then no banana split can tempt me."

T. J. Kinnally, manager of the Harding Sandwich bar, formerly the famous Righelmer, opposite the county building on Clark street, declared yesterday afternoon: "In twenty-two years here at this place I've never seen the like of today's rush, not even on the original armistice day. Since 8 this morning we haven't been able to get a broom to the floor or stop to clean up the place, and I'm confident many people have been turned away than were served, yet everybody's happy. I haven't heard a cross word."

A soft spoken, gray haired woman and her tall young son entered the Palmer house luncheon room about 4 p. m. "I'm a stranger from New Orleans," she said to a waitress. "Can you get a glass of beer here?" The waitress brought a bottle of brew, explaining the hotel had run out of draft beer. "O, my, how good it looks," the woman exclaimed. "I have always kept the law, but I did miss beer."

Bartenders worked at top speed for hours to serve the throng that jammed the renowned crystal bar at the Bre-

Italy Makes Light Wine for America.

BERLIN, April 7.—(P)—The first shipment of "Schlossbrau" brewed especially for 3.2 per cent consumers in the United States, started on its way to New York today.

The newspapers, of course, recorded the return of legal beer in America. "Happy Days Again" was the headline over one dispatch. "Gambinus Rules America" was another.

Italy Makes Special Wine. ROME, April 7.—(P)—Italian wine-makers are experimenting with a 2.2 per cent wine for export to the United States. It was disclosed today. The first shipment will be sent soon.

Britain Sees Drop in Crime. LONDON, April 7.—(P)—The advent of beer in the United States was reported prominently today in the British press. Newspapers predicted a reduction of the criminal class and a saving in the expense of fighting gangsters.

The Daily Telegraph said: "Congress at last recognized it was better for the state to raise money from the tax on liquor trade than to spend millions in fighting gangsters, who for 14 years have alone profited. But the moral aspect of the question has not been overlooked. Hereafter we believe Americans will see that temperance is a safer ideal than prohibition."

The Times said: "Illegal trade in liquor that was often adulterated and sometimes poisonous developed a new type of criminal whose half-welcome defiance of law and huge profits made him a menacing and corrupting influence in the public life of the country. Moderate control is substituted for total suppression; and it may be hoped that the change will mean a richer treasury, a poorer criminal class, wider respect for law and order, and a happier people."

French Slightly Disappointed.

PARIS, April 7.—(P)—Return of beer to the United States was greeted in France with temperate enthusiasm. The pleasure was lessened because France wants to sell wine, while newspapers comment that beer is from the German market. French wines average about 9 per cent alcohol and the lightest contains 6 to 7 per cent.

Yanks in Vienna Celebrate.

VIENNA, April 7.—(P)—Newspapers here today carried headlines reading "Happy American." "America Swimming in Happiness Again," and "Transports of Joy." Many Americans living in Vienna celebrated the return of beer in their native land.

All Alaska Lacks Is Beer.

JUNEAU, Alaska, April 7.—(P)—All that was lacking for the return of beer to Alaska today was beer. The territory has no breweries and heavy American tariffs barred Canadian beer, but shipments are due from the United States Tuesday.

6 HORSES DRAW AL SMITH'S CASE; HE'S DELIGHTED

New York, April 7.—(P)—The happy warrior said it was a happy day.

Six blue ribbon Clydesdale horses drew an old time brewery truck up 5th avenue, stopped at the Empire State building.

From the truck was delivered a carton of bottled beer for former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, long time advocate of beer's return.

"Surely it is a happy day for all, because it will in some measure deplete the ranks of the unemployed and promote happiness and good cheer," he said.

CORR PROCLAIMS CLEANUP WEEKS FOR CHICAGOANS

Acting Mayor Frank J. Corr today will sign a proclamation designating April 17 to 23 inclusive as "clean up, paint up and brighten up weeks," and urging adults to cooperate with school children in making Chicago an attractive World's Fair city.

Mayor Corr will present his proclamation to the Chicago High School Clean Up Campaign league, an organization of leaders of the movement in senior and junior high schools, at noon. Evelyn Blank of Harrison Technical High school is president.

SWANSON BARS BEER FROM WASHINGTON STORES NAVY RUNS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 7.—[Special.]—The secretary of the navy will not permit sale of beer in the navy stores and restaurants in the District of Columbia.

Because of Secretary Swanson's order to this effect, issued today, the navy employees still are crying for beer and will be despite the fact that in the other governmental controlled restaurants, even unto the senate and house restaurants in the capitol building, soon will have beer.

In the other official departments the new beer, officially "nonintoxicating," will be considered in the same class with milk, tea, coffee, and pop, and it will be sold without restraint.

But in the navy department, presided over by Mr. Swanson, there will be no beer. The order affects the large cafeteria serving the employees in the navy building, the navy yard, marine barracks, naval hospital, and the naval observatory, all in the city of Washington; the naval air station at Annapolis, D. C., and the naval research laboratory at Bellevue, D. C.

Mr. Swanson declined to explain his taboo on beer in the district. It was suggested to the secretary that the order was inconsistent with a order issued by him yesterday allowing beer to be sold in naval stations, yards, and stores elsewhere in the country where local laws do not conflict.

"The order speaks for itself," Secretary Swanson said. One explanation offered in the secretary's defense, though not at his direction in any way, was that the navy would never submit to the indignity of applying for a beer license from the District commissioners as the District beer law provides. The navy asks quarter or license from no one.

Danville, Ind., April 7.—(P)—Between 20 and 35 persons were injured, none believed seriously, when Big Four train No. 40 rammed into the rear of No. 20 of the same line as it stopped here to discharge a passenger shortly before 11 o'clock tonight. Both are eastbound passenger trains. Trainmen said the block signal might have failed.

Most seriously injured were Miss Cora E. Wells of St. Louis, Mo., who suffered a broken leg, and Isidor A. Rubin, New York City, several of whose ribs were broken.

HITLER SEIZES CONTROL OF ALL GERMAN STATES

Dictatorship Extended by His Cabinet.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
BERLIN, April 7.—Greater power than was ever held by the Kaiser or King of Germany is in the hands of Adolf Hitler. His cabinet today approved a law which reorganizes political Germany. It welds the nation into a strong centralized state with all men in important government posts directly responsible to the chancellor. Only the Reichswehr (regular army) remains in the hands of President Paul von Hindenburg.

Germany's states, which have been unwilling to surrender sovereign rights, will be ruled by governors appointed by Hitler. The governors will be under his direct orders. They will appoint governments which cannot be overthrown by parliaments.

Governor of Prussia.
Hitler himself assumes the governorship of Prussia.

All state parliaments were reorganized by a decree, which provided that membership must be based on the Reichstag elections of March 6, except in Prussia where direct elections took place the same day.

These state parliaments will be permitted to express their wishes for appointment of state officials, but it will be Hitler's governor who has the final say.

In ten of Germany's 17 states, Hitler will hold an absolute majority after the reorganization. The governments of all 17 states will be patterned after the national government, combining the National Socialist and Nationalist forces. All communes and municipalities also will be administered by Nazis and their monarchist allies.

Thousands Are Dismissed.
To enforce this, Hitler's government has dismissed thousands of officials. A special law will legalize the dismissals and reduce or abolish pensions due the discharged officials.

While absolute control by Hitler and his allies over Germany is being enforced politically a similar reorganization is being effected in all walks of life with an enthusiasm and thoroughness that is breathtaking. Private clubs unhesitatingly are ousting their boards of directors to replace republican, Jewish, or neutral leaders in favor of dyed in the wool Hitlerites or Nationalists.

Semi-official bodies are in the throes of a gigantic reorganization. Even professional groups are obeying the Nazi command to "realign and join forces for the national reconstruction" and are ousting their leaders.

All Walks Affected.
This has occurred in associations of authors, journalists, actors, painters, musicians, farm unions, schools, students, professors, doctors, butchers, youth movements, sports, industries and trades in all branches. It even extends to religious bodies and welfare societies.

The only organization to offer slight resistance was the National Association of German Industry. When ordered to oust its present leaders, Dr. Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, head of the great Krupp works, negotiated with Hitler and the Nazi industrialist, Fritz Thyssen. A compromise was reached whereby the directorate will not resign at once.

The vast industrial organization stressed its desire for close cooperation with Hitler in a statement issued today.

"All questions of organization of the national association and affiliated groups will be carried out in cooperation with the government," the statement said. "This also will be true in nominations to the board of directors."

The bureau of industry have assured Hitler that they will draw up their organizations "only after an exchange of thoughts with the government; separate actions will be rejected."

To Revive Decorations.
Students of constitutional problems in Germany consider the bureaucratic structure erected by Hitler an instrument simplifying an administration which was cumbersome because it tried to cling to antiquated and sentimental traditions.

Hitler also is planning to reintroduce the decorations, orders and titles so dear to the hearts of Germans. They were abolished by the republic. According to a law prepared by Hitler, the awards will be made by the Reich's president, who is advised by a special "honors committee."

"Great national services can thus be suitably rewarded with decorations and orders," a government spokesman said.

Such services embrace military, political and economic activities, especially in the field of culture and science.

It also is planned to grant estates to "the new peers."

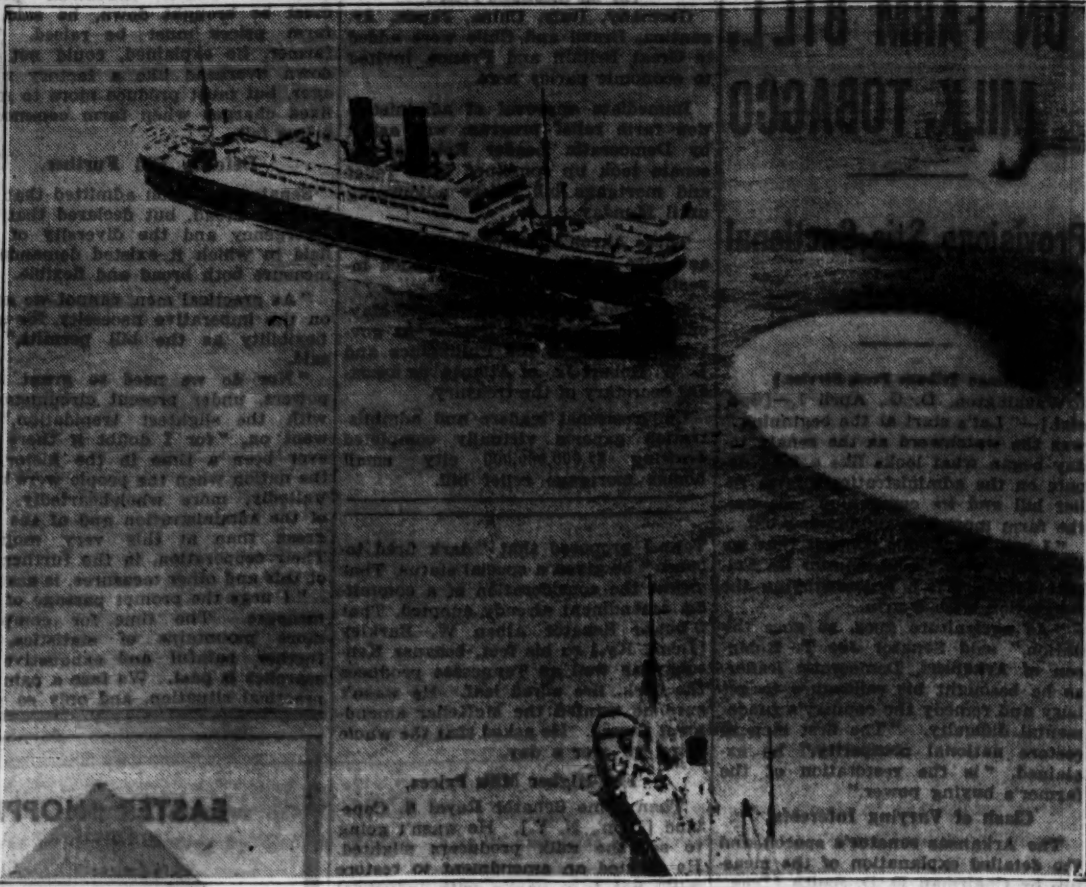

Anti-Jew Drive Continues.
Meanwhile, the Nazi campaign against Jewish professions has continued. The ministry of labor is drafting measures to eliminate Jewish physicians from insurance jobs and as medical examiners to candidates.

Daughter, don't turn your pretty nose up to supply. Want't worth the fight? Of course not, honey! It's the principle of the thing, though it did much to be ladies and gentlemen and beer's not so bad, though, I guess, at that. C'mon, let's find a movie.

METHODISTS ANSWER BEER'S RETURN WITH VOW OF ABSTINENCE

Methodists will answer the return of legal beer with a campaign for total abstinence throughout that church. This course was decided on yesterday by Methodist leaders at a meeting of the area commission on citizenship at the Chicago temple. The meeting was called by Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf of Chicago.

While the citizenship commission plans to consider other municipal, state, and national issues, the leaders asserted that its chief interest centers in the return of beer. Methodist action in reference to temperance problems was referred yesterday to a subcommittee headed by Dr. Almer E. Pennewell, pastor of the Ravenswood Methodist Episcopal church.

Dr. Pennewell presented a series of resolutions prepared by his committee with the view of consolidating Methodist opinion. The question of what disciplinary action should be taken against Methodists who go into the beer business was asked of the committee by the Rev. Dr. Leon L. Hammett, superintendent of the Joliet-Dixon district of the Rock River conference. The committee replied that no new rules other than those that now exist in the church will be drafted.

Still more puzzling was the status of unemployed Methodists who are given work in breweries. This was left unanswered.

dates for the voluntary labor scheme. Jewish medical students are barred from Bavarian universities. Jewish lawyers who have been deprived of their practice have been ordered to submit pledges of their loyalty "to the government of the national awakening" in their applications for readmission to the bar.

Dr. Hans Frank, Bavarian minister of justice, has drafted a new course of study for law students. Under it the government of the Reich is required to employ in the offices of Jewish lawyers.

The government has announced that Americans do not need the "certificates of integrity" which are required before persons may leave the country. The customary visa is sufficient, the announcement said.

RULE IT'S LEGAL TO ROUTE BEER THROUGH IOWA

Council Bluffs, Ia., April 7.—(AP)—A challenge by County Attorney Robert Organ of the legality of an interstate shipment of 3.2 per cent beer from one "wet" state to another across "dry" Iowa died late today after state officials at Des Moines had ruled the shipment was lawful.

Two truck drivers who had been arrested while driving 600 cases of beer from St. Joseph, Mo., to Marshall, Minn., were released, along with the driver of a third truck, owned by Hardwick, Minn., and Charles H. Bartlow of Marshall.

NILES CENTER BANK HELD UP; TELLER IS SHOT

Bandits Seize $6,000 and Escape.

Harry Mueller of Morton Grove, teller of the National Bank of Niles Center, was shot and seriously wounded yesterday when he attempted to disarm one of three bandits who held up the bank and got $6,000. Mueller was rushed to the St. Francis hospital in Evanston, where his condition was reported critical from loss of blood. Last evening a blood transfusion was made to bolster his strength. Edward H. Harris, 5201 Oakton street, Niles Center, candidate for village president, gave a pint and a half of blood. The bullet struck Mueller in the left leg just below the hip.

One Bandit Waits in Auto.
The gunmen entered the bank, which is at Lincoln avenue and Oakton street, just around the corner from the Niles Center police station, shortly before closing time. A fourth member of the gang waited at the wheel of an automobile outside.

Leonard Brumann and Miss Janet Ruesch, assistant cashiers, were in the bank at the time. While two of the robbers stood guard over Miss Ruesch, the third took Baumgartner into the teller's cage and vault while he scooped the currency into a bag. Miss Emily Muench, a teacher from the Lincoln school, Niles Center, arrived during the robbery to drop collections from the school cafeteria, and John Meier, clerk of the town of Teessville, also arrived with a deposit. The bandits made them sit down under guard, but did not rob them.

Grapples with Bandit.
Mueller, who had gone out to buy a cigar, then returned and saw the gun in the robbers' hands. He grappled with the man nearest the door, but was shot by the latter's companion. The bandits then fled, leaving behind them $20,000 which was in the vault.

Chief of Police Charles Holmes of Niles Center saw the bandits leave the bank and started in pursuit, but their car outdistanced him. The bank had been reopened only recently in charge of a conservator.

TRIBUNE PAPER BOAT OPENS LAKE SEASON TODAY

The steamer New York News will leave Port Colborne on Lake Erie, at 7 o'clock this morning with 13,013 tons of newspaper for The Tribune. The voyage of the New York News will inaugurate the lake shipping season of THE TRIBUNE.

In past years the season has been inaugurated with a race by boats of the fleet. Ice flows in the Straits of Mackinac halted plans for the race this year. The New York News will attempt passage through the ice fields. If it is successful other members of the fleet, including the Thorold and the Tribune, will follow.

If the New York News succeeds in passing the straits it is expected to arrive here Tuesday. Preparations for unloading its cargo have been made by Harry Laird, traffic manager of THE TRIBUNE.

GERMANY LIFTS BAN ON OPERA SINGER AS U. S. CONSUL PROTESTS

BERLIN, April 7.—(AP)—Miss Catherine Kersting of Wichita, Kan., who was given compulsory leave of absence three weeks ago by the Koenigsberg Municipal opera, was reinstated today through the intervention of the ministry of culture in Berlin, which acted upon representations by the American consul general.

Together with a number of Jewish artists of various nationalities, Miss Kersting was asked to leave the opera company last month. The consul explained that since there had been no dissatisfaction with her performances, and since she is not a Jewess, her dismissal had caused unfortunate misapprehensions in America.

The new authorities at the Koenigsberg opera have invited Miss Kersting to resume her place there.

STEPHEN A. DAY FIGHTS MOVE FOR SOVIET TREATY

In a letter yesterday sent to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Attorney Stephen A. Day, son of a former secretary of state, urged continuation of the policy of nonrecognition of soviet Russia. Mr. Day signed the letter as president of the Lincoln-Jefferson Liberty league, a patriotic association. Word has come to the league that the government is contemplating a trade treaty with the soviet, the lawyer wrote. He then quoted from a report submitted to the senate in 1924 by Charles Evans Hughes, now chief justice of the Supreme court, who had investigated the activities of the communist party in this country. Mr. Hughes found "the existence of a disciplined party equipped with a program aiming at the overthrow of the institutions of this country by force and violence."

Mr. Day next called attention to the investigations of a congressional committee headed by Hamilton Fish of New York, which "upheld" the position of Mr. Hughes. "Events subsequent to this report," wrote Mr. Day, "have only served to emphasize the correctness of the findings and recommendations."

SHOT AS ROBBER, DIES.
Frank Stachurs, 21 years old, 1807 Dick-street, an alleged robber, died yesterday in the Bridwell hospital of wounds incurred on Nov. 7 last year when he tried to escape arrest at his home. Stachurs was alleged to have preyed upon motorists stopped at night by traffic lights.

LAWYERS CLASH; TRIAL OF NEGROES NEAR TO JURORS

Prosecutor Cites "Sinister Influences."

DOCATU, Ala., April 7.—(AP)—The fate of Haywood Patterson, first of nine Negroes retried in the "Scottsboro case" since the United States Supreme court nullified the previous death sentences, named the jury late today. About six hours was allowed to the arguments, which began at 1 p. m.

Part of the state's argument concerned Ruby Bates, one of the alleged attack victims. She has been missing from her Huntsville, Ala., home for several weeks while rumors were circulated that she had been kidnapped.

Reverses Former Story.
She walked into court yesterday, chic in new spring coat and hat to match, saying she had just arrived from a chitch-like trip to New York. She completely contradicted her statements in the first trial; denied she and Mrs. Victoria Price had been attacked by the Negroes while on a freight train on which they were "bumming" their way home to Huntsville after a futile search for work in Chattanooga. The state attacked her story today in its plea to the jury.

The state of Alabama wants you. If this testimony shows the defendant innocent, to turn him loose," said Solicitor H. G. Bailey of Boaz, Ala., who was prosecutor in the original trials in 1931. "But, on the other hand, if he is guilty, the state of Alabama wants you to send him to the electric chair. I believe you will be fair."

Finds New York Sinister.
Bailey then spoke of "sinister influences" in New York and contrasted the appearance of Mrs. Price in a obviously cheap attire with that of the Bates girl.

"She (Mrs. Price) didn't come here in New York clothes," Bailey said. She could have rouged her lips and cheeks and stood on the streets of Huntsville without going out to seek honest toll.

"We don't say that she is what she should have been. She has erred, but our laws say no man shall lay a hand on a woman against her will."

The argument of Solicitor Wade Wright of Decatur was twice interrupted by Samuel S. Leibowitz, chief of defense counsel, to enter motions for a mistrial, both of which were overruled by Judge James E. Horton, who instructed the jury to disregard the statements.

Sarcastic Toward Court.
When Judge Horton overruled his motion for a mistrial Leibowitz said, "I submit, your honor, that a conviction in this case will not be worth a pinch of snuff."

A moment later, as Wright disparaged the testimony of Lester Carr, a defense witness, he referred to him as "Mr. Carterinsky, now," and again Leibowitz entered a motion for a mistrial on the grounds that it was raising prejudice. Wright had been previously referred to witnesses being "bought with Jew money." Wright declared Ruby Bates has perjured herself.

That charge was declared by George W. Chamie Sr. of Chattanooga, first speaker for the defense, to be a "fabrication."

"I want to uphold the principles of womanhood in the south," he said, after telling the jury he was southern born and the son of a Confederate soldier.

Calls Case International.
Attorney Leibowitz closed his argument to the jury tonight with the statement that a "world issue" was involved. He added "you are deciding more than the guilt or innocence of this Negro. You are deciding a world issue."

Organizations throughout the world have sent protests on the handling of the case to Alabama authorities, since the first conviction.

The court took a recess until tomorrow. Leibowitz said he would consume about one hour more. Then Attorney General Knight will close for the state.

Reports of imminent mob action continued to flare here and in Huntsville, a few miles to the east, but died as quickly in the face of investigation by county officers and National Guardsmen called out as a precaution.

TOM MIX FIGHTS $9,700 BILL FOR HIS APPENDICITIS

Los Angeles, Cal., April 7.—(AP)—Tom Mix was back in court again today, but this time the argument was with his doctor.

The film cowboy star only yesterday won a suit in which his former wife sued him for $50,000.

Today his doctor, Gurn Stout, sought $9,700 as a fee for medical services alleged to have been rendered to the actor when he was ill with appendicitis about two years ago.

Mix contended he did not employ Dr. Stout to assist in the operation. Dr. Stout said only skill saved Mix.

LARGE OUTLAYS BY U. S. AROUSE INFLATION PERIL

Complicates Program of Roosevelt.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(Special.)—A vast public works program and other plans for putting more men back at work, arresting further deflation of prices and wages and reviving business generally are now under consideration by the President and his advisers, it was learned tonight.

Whether these projects, which would require an outlay of several billions of dollars, could be carried through without producing inflation of a dangerous character is the troublesome consideration involved in the discussions that have taken place around the President's cabinet table.

Inflation Rumors Persistent.
The rumor that inflation is "just around the corner" has run like wildfire through the business world. By some it is thought to account for the upward trend of security and commodity prices in the last few days. Traders are seen getting in on the ground floor in expectation of skyrocketing prices resulting from inflation.

The story has been current that the administration order to turn in all gold and gold certificates under pain of severe penalties was issued in preparation for inflation, inasmuch as inflation would cause a rush for gold and not even threats of punishment would relax the grip of the hoarders on the metal.

The report is emphatically denied by the treasury which asserts the only object is to compel hoarders to do what others have already done voluntarily, and, through licensing legitimate transactions in gold, to restore the country, in effect, to a gold payment basis.

Inflationists Resume Activity.
There has been a conspicuous revival in congressional circles of agitation for various forms of inflation, most of which involve outright inflation of the currency, for the purpose of raising commodity prices. It is the general expectation that some such bill will be passed by congress unless

ROOSEVELT SPENDS DAY RECEIVING LONG LIST OF VISITORS

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(AP.)—What President Roosevelt did today: 8 to 11 a. m.—Dictated mail.

11 a. m.—Received Maine and New Hampshire delegations on the Portsmouth navy yard.

11:30—Discussed the home refinancing and bank reform bills with Chairman Steagall of house banking committee.

11:45 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.—Received numerous visitors, including Andrew Mellon, retiring ambassador to Great Britain.

1:00 p. m.—Talked with Chairman Sumners of house judiciary committee on city financing legislation.

2 to 4 p. m.—Met with cabinet.

4 p. m.—Met with newspaper men.

4:30—Discussed administration on farm relief with Secretary Wallace, Bernard M. Baruch, and Frank O. Lowden.

5 p. m.—Received Senator Duffy and Gov. Schmedeman of Wisconsin.

5:30 to 6:30—Drafted Tennessee valley program with congressional leaders.

6:45 p. m.—Talked with Secretary Woodin.

7 p. m.—Returned to mansion for dinner.

The President heads it off with a plan of his own.

Up to date the administration has not warned to any of the congressional inflation schemes, at least to such as involved the printing of fiat money. The President is said to have told a number of these inflationists that there is going to be no starting of the printing presses to increase the circulating medium. It was resort to printing press money that led to catastrophes in Germany and Russia.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, is convinced that a widespread restoration of purchasing power is essential to the inducement of restoration of purchasing power economic recovery. What is needed is something to prime the business pump and the restoration of purchasing power to large groups of the population will accomplish the priming, in his opinion.

Alternative Disastrous.
This must be done unless the depression is to be allowed to run its course, deflating wages and prices still further. That may be what the inexorable economic law naturally demands for the correction of the world's economic excesses. The result would benefit the survivors but the toll of human victims and the cost in human miser would be frightful, even if revolution itself were avoided.

The President deeply feels that these natural processes of deflation must be arrested at all hazards save that of creating more misery such as would flow from an inundation of printing press money. Hence he is striving to restore purchasing power by artificial means.

He thinks his farm commodity bill will restore the purchasing power of the farmer by boosting farm product prices. The farmers profiting more will buy more and the wheels of factories producing the articles farmers consume will begin turning again.

Of course, there are many who regard the President mistaken in this expectation. They say the farm relief plan would only tax the consuming part of the population to benefit the agricultural part, reducing the purchasing power of one group to raise the purchasing power of another.

Has Faith in Debt Reduction.
Much of what he aims at will be accomplished, Mr. Roosevelt thinks, by the legislation for scaling down of farm mortgages and similar legislation for the small home owner. It will reduce debt burdens and thereby promote an improved purchasing power.

But these things, even if they pan out successfully, will not be enough to prime the pump, the President has been advised. What is needed is to put vast numbers of men back to work. The $50,000 men he hopes to employ in the reforestation camps are only a fraction of the number that must be given work if purchasing power is to be restored sufficiently to prime the pump. How to do this is the problem with which the President is struggling.

Foremost among the plans under consideration is a vast public works program. Senator Robert F. Wagner (Dem., N. Y.) has a public works bill calling for a billion dollar bond issue, which he thinks would prime the pump. This may prove to be the germ of the plan eventually matured. Some think not less than five billion dollars would be required.

Experts Disagree on Effect.
Whether such an undertaking would produce inflation is the subject of dispute even among economists. The experts admit that such schemes in the past have invariably resulted in inflation, but some think that history will not necessarily repeat itself in this instance.

The machinery for really effective inflation is embodied in the emergency banking legislation which congress passed to end the banking moratorium and the new type of currency which that law created. The emergency federal reserve bank notes which were to make the banks solvent, but which were never needed, are backed by bonds only, and consequently can be expanded as long as the government issues bonds for public works or any other reason.

If this money issuing power is coupled on behind a driving force which will pump the money into circulation an effective inflationary move can be launched. Previous moves to inflate the currency, such as the Glass-Steagall authorization for almost a billion dollars in new national bank notes, have failed because there was no provision for putting the money to work.

Putting New Money to Work.
An extensive public works program, financed by the new currency, would solve the question of actually getting inflationary currency into circulation and trade channels.

The new money might not even have to be used if President Roosevelt's drive to bring back hoarded gold puts enough of the precious metal into the reserve banks to support ordinary currency. Reserve banks could buy or rediscount new government bond issues for public works, paying for them with federal reserve notes to the extent of almost two billion dollars.

Reserve notes, however, must have a 40 per cent gold backing, and the gold in the reserve banks, therefore, acts as a brake on their issuance. Only about two billions or two and one-half billions of them could be issued on the reserve bank's present stock of gold. If this supply were insufficient, however, the bond backed reserve bank notes could be used without limit.

France Votes $800,000 to Pay Farmer to Spoil Grain

PARIS, April 7.—(AP.)—A subsidy of $800,000 was voted in the chamber of deputies today to encourage farmers to denature wheat, making it unfit for human consumption but suitable for feeding to live stock.

SENATE DEBATES ON FARM BILL, MILK, TOBACCO

Provisions Stir Sectional Interests.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(Special.)—Let's start at the beginning," was the watchword as the senate today began what looks like a long debate on the administration's farm relief bill and its companion measure, the farm mortgage refinancing bill.

"I ask unanimous consent that we may start over," said Senator Le Follette (Rad., Wis.), accompanying the suggestion with a grin.

"As agriculture goes, so goes the nation," said Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, as he besought his colleagues to get busy and remedy the country's fundamental difficulty. "The first step to restore national prosperity," he explained, "is the restoration of the farmer's buying power."

Clash of Varying Interests.
The Arkansas senator's speech and the detailed explanation of the measure by Chairman E. D. Smith (Dem., S. C.) of the agricultural committee were the major oratorical efforts of the day.

Equally interesting, however, were the sometimes farcical scenes that took place as senators began the first of what promises to be many quarrels over the fat of products peculiar to their states.

The senate Republicans met to inquire into the possibility of substituting for the administration relief bill a measure limited to the leasing and removal from production of marginal agricultural lands.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Dem.,

DAY IN WASHINGTON

[By the Associated Press.]

Germany, Italy, China, Japan, Argentina, Brazil and Chile were added to Great Britain and France, invited to economic parity here.

Immediate approval of administration farm relief program was asked by Democratic Leader Robinson as senate took up combined farm relief and mortgage bill before adjourning until Monday.

Three Akron survivors told of crash as house naval committee opened investigation.

President Roosevelt nominated Mayor Frank Murphy of Detroit as governor general of the Philippines and L. W. Robert Jr. of Atlanta as assistant secretary of the treasury.

Congressional leaders and administration experts virtually completed drafting $2,000,000,000 city small homes mortgage relief bill.

Tenn.] proposed that "dark fired to bacco" be given a special status. That meant the consideration of a committee amendment already adopted. That brought Senator Alben W. Barkley (Dem., Ky.) to his feet, because Kentucky as well as Tennessee produces the dark, fire cured leaf. He wasn't sure he wanted the McKellar amendment passed. He asked that the whole thing go over a day.

For Higher Milk Prices.
Then came Senator Royal S. Copeland (Dem., N. Y.). He wasn't going to see the milk producers slighted. He wanted an amendment to restore milk, not to a parity with industrial prices as the bill is supposed to do, but to the highest price it had brought in the last twenty years.

During the resulting tangle Senator La Follette suggested to start afresh. "I mean, consider the matter de novo," he explained. It was so ordered.

Senator Robinson said it was well enough to argue that the law of supply and demand be allowed to work out the remedy, but foreign trade barriers as well as the immovability of the farmers' fixed charges would not allow supply and demand to function.

Senator Robinson pointed out the effect on industry of the virtual disappearance of the purchasing power of the 44 per cent of the population living on farms or in rural communities. Either industrial prices must be brought down, he said, or farm prices must be raised. The farmer, he explained, could not cut down overhead like a factory manager, but must produce more to meet fixed charges when farm commodity prices fell.

Defends Bill Further.
Senator Robinson admitted that the bill was broad, but declared that the emergency and the diversity of the field in which it existed demanded a measure both broad and flexible.

"As practical men, cannot we agree on the imperative necessity for such flexibility as the bill permits," he said.

"Nor do we need to grant such powers, under present circumstances with the slightest trepidation," he went on, "for I doubt if there has ever been a time in the history of the nation when the people were more unitedly, more wholeheartedly back of the administration and of the congress than at this very moment. Their cooperation, in the furtherance of this and other measures, is assured."

"I urge the prompt passage of this measure. The time for compiling more mountains of statistics, for further painful and exhaustive researches is past. We face a painfully practical situation, and only so practical action can save us."

Russia Postpones Trial of Britons Until April 12

MOSCOW, April 7.—(AP.)—The trial of employees of the British Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical company on charges of espionage and sabotage has been postponed until April 12.

The six Britons have provisionally retained four Russian defense attorneys, who will decide after examining the evidence whether to accept the cases. British counsel, who were not permitted to participate in the defense, are on their way here to observe the trial.

COURTNEY ASKS SHOWDOWN ON LANG'S THREATS

Orders Perjury Action in Nitti Shooting.

Aroused by the rumors, veiled threats and insinuations surrounding the disclosures that Detective Harry Lang, formerly attached to the mayor's hoodlum squad, deliberately attempted to kill Frank Nitti, Capone gangster, State Attorney Courtney yesterday ordered an immediate showdown.

The announcement came on the heels of the formal return in court of an indictment, charging Lang with assault to kill and his suspension from the department by Commissioner Allman, who intimated last night that Detective Harry Miller, the other member of the hoodlum squad, will be transferred from the detective bureau today.

Lang threatens to "tell all." Lang has openly announced that if pushed far enough he will open up and tell the "truth," as he calls it, and that his story will "crack the Democratic party." Miller has done considerable talking and told the grand jury of rumors which he heard to the effect that Lang was supposed to have been paid $15,000 by Ned Newberry, gang chief, who since has been murdered, to kill Nitti. Lang vehemently denies this story.

Prosecutor Courtney has accepted the challenge of Lang's threat to talk "if pushed," and has instructed his assistant, Charles A. Dougherty, to "push" the charges to the limit. In accordance with the "pushing plan," an additional indictment for perjury is to be sought against Lang early next week.

The perjury indictment was ordered when rumors were called to the prosecutor's attention to the effect that the assault indictment was only a gesture; that Nitti would never appear to prosecute any one, and that ultimately Lang would be freed and the case forgotten. On a perjury charge Nitti would not be a material witness.

Prosecutor Courtney and Commissioner Allman would like to know, they said, where Detective Miller heard the rumors regarding the Newberry-Lang plot story, and why he did not report the rumors to the state's attorney and his superior.

Miller accompanied Lang on the raid. Miller, it was, according to his own story, who discovered the gang hideout in the loop office building. And it was Lang, so Miller now says, who ordered the raid, following a supposed conversation with Newberry. Inquiry at the detective bureau yesterday showed that it was Miller who called and asked first that the squad of Al Hahn be sent to help him, and when this squad was not available that the squad of George Maher be sent. Maher's squad was out.

Seek Source of Lang's Funds.

An investigation was also being made of the report prevalent in the detective bureau last evening that statements supposedly made by Detectives Lang and Miller immediately after the shooting were not in the files when turned over to Prosecutor Dougherty prior to the trial. The only statement produced in court was one made by Detective Mike Shannon, who, with his partner, Detective Chris Callahan, was called in to help in the raid at the last minute. Callahan witnessed the shooting, but Shannon was in another room. Shannon made the report for the detective team.

The prosecutors said they also would like to know where Detective Lang, who, like other policemen, has not been receiving his pay regularly, obtained the funds to employ two former assistant prosecutors, Abe Marovitz and Daniel Covelli, to appear for him in court. A bond which he supplied was furnished by a surety company, which collected a fee. His bank account, if it can be found, will be scrutinized, it was announced.

Courtney Orders Action. "I am going before the grand jury early next week," said Prosecutor Dougherty. "I am doing this on the order of State's Attorney Courtney, who is highly incensed over the case. This undoubtedly is the most

MINIMUM WAGE LAW FOR WOMEN PASSED BY N. Y. LEGISLATURE

Albany, N. Y., April 7.—(AP)—A minimum wage bill intended chiefly to aid women and children employed in sweat shops and loft factories of New York City was passed and sent to Gov. Lehman today by the New York legislature.

The bill, with which Mr. Lehman is in sympathy, sets up a wage director in the labor department and provides for wage boards to review conditions and recommend wages for women and children. Failure of the manufacturers to abide by the minimum wage established makes them liable to fine and imprisonment.

Behind today's favorable action is a 20 year fight for a minimum wage law. More than two decades ago three young and nationally obscure Democratic legislators and a young woman social worker were trying to convince a legislature the minimum wage was a good idea. The quartet is not so young today, nor at all obscure. They are:

President Roosevelt, then a state senator from Hyde Park.
Alfred E. Smith, then a member of the assembly.
United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, then a state senator from New York City.
Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

astounding situation I have ever encountered in my many years as a prosecutor."

Efforts were being made last evening to furnish a new bond for Detective Lang on the indictment. The bond is $10,000. That of Nitti was $25,000 when the situation was reversed. Lang stayed under cover while the bond negotiations were being carried on. The sheriff is looking for him with a capias.

Attorney Ben Short said that Nitti was resting from his court ordeal. The attorney reiterated that Nitti would be glad to forget the entire matter. However, Nitti is scheduled to appear in Judge Prystalski's court on subpoena on April 13. This is to assure his appearance as the prosecuting witness against the detective.

President Cashes First Pay Check; Returns 15 Pct.

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today cashed his first pay check as chief executive and immediately sent back to the treasury 15 per cent of the amount—the same reduction he gave to government workers.

FR. O'DONNELL OF NOTRE DAME GAINS SLIGHTLY

The Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of the University of Notre Dame, was reported "somewhat improved" yesterday by physicians at St. Joseph hospital in South Bend.

Father O'Donnell has been ill for two weeks with a throat infection and a week ago was removed to the hospital from the college infirmary when his condition became worse. The chief danger, physicians said, lies in bronchial pneumonia, which developed Thursday. Dr. Bernard A. Kamm, throat specialist, announced that the throat infection was subsiding.

Following an examination at 9 o'clock last night Dr. Frank J. Powers, university physician, announced that Father O'Donnell was "resting easy and maintaining his gains."

Clam Clamps on Duck's Bill; It's Good-by Duck

Bellingham, Wash., April 7.—(AP)—A strange marine battle between a scoter, or black duck, and a butter clam off the ferry slip at Orcas Island ended in apparent victory for the clam.

For five days the scoter, his beak held tightly closed by the clam, weakened steadily.

The scoter appeared exhausted Wednesday and the weight of the clam bowed his head on his breast. Duck and clam disappeared today. The clam won, observers said.

GROCERY LISTS TODAY TAKE NOTE OF NEW 3.2 BEER

First Melons of the Year to Be on Market.

BY PAUL POTTER.
Thousands of weekend family grocery lists will be revamped today, to include "three point two" beer, pretzels, cheese, rye bread, crackers, pigs' feet, or one of the many favorite sausages used in sandwiches.
Grocers announce ample supplies of all these items, as well as the addition of a few edibles just coming into the Chicago market with Easter and spring in the offing. The first water-melons and cantaloupes of the year have arrived from California in limited quantities in time for today's shopping.
New onions from Texas and grapes from South America also will greet the housewives looking for the unusual in the markets.

Strawberries Plentiful.
From Louisiana are coming 3,000 carloads of fine strawberries. Chicago will receive a supply of the berries today, selling at 10 to 13 cents a pint. Strawberries are expected to continue plentiful and at low prices through the spring, with prospects of further crops from Alabama and Mississippi in a few weeks.
Some of the perishable foods have advanced somewhat in price, even in the groceries which are "absorbing" the sales tax. In this category are large heads of lettuce, tomatoes, some kinds of potatoes, butter, eggs, and spinach.
Eggs are selling at retail in Chicago at higher levels than are regarded as justified by ample supplies being received from the country. This is the direct charge being made by officials of the Institute of American Poultry Industries, who assert speculators have been buying large quantities of fresh eggs to be placed in cold storage.

Store Car Lots of Eggs.
The rate of carlot movement of eggs into storage already has caused a reserve supply greater than a year ago, in spite of the certainty that spring country production will continue heavy. Butter production in the country, on the other hand, has been lighter than usual, which accounts for somewhat higher prices today than two weeks ago. Cheese prices remain consistently low.

Most of the fresh stocks of veal, lamb, and pork being offered today are said by butchers to be the lowest priced in years, quality considered. Pot roasts continue to be economical, especially those from larger hives.
Bargains in flour, sugar, bread, canned foods, cereals, and other staple items of the diet are being announced by many stores today. Viewed in the light of advancing wholesale wheat and sugar prices, they challenge shrewd shoppers to lay in liberal supplies.
Although the end of the apple season is approaching, dealers yesterday purchased large quantities of western eating apples for today's shoppers from car lot shipments out of storage. Heavy purchases are anticipated by those planning to prepare for the Jewish holiday feasts. Grapefruit and Florida juice oranges also are lower in price today.

Wife Sues W. L. Lomax Jr., Northwestern 'U' Student
Mrs. Martha Webb Lomax, daughter of R. W. Webb, vice president of the Witte Engine Works, Kansas City, Mo., yesterday filed suit for divorce from William L. Lomax Jr., 1970 Oak avenue, Evanston, a student in the Northwestern university engineering school. The bill, filed in the Superior court, charged cruelty. The couple married Aug. 2, 1927, and separated a year ago.

BRIDE OF INDIANA PROFESSOR DIES IN AUTO CRASH

Amarillo, Tex., April 7.—(AP)—Mrs. Wanda Louise Braud, 21, bride of two days of Francis Braud, 23, French instructor at the University of Indiana at Bloomington, was killed in an automobile accident near here tonight while the two were on their honeymoon.
Braud, of Porters, France, who has been in the United States for two and one-half years on a teaching fellowship, was injured. His condition was not believed critical.
Braud begged District Attorney Grady Hazlewood to "Accuse me. Take me to your court. I am to blame. I killed someone."
According to Braud and J. E. Farris of Frederick, Okla., who was driving the second car, the accident occurred on the highway near here when the instructor attempted to pass a third car and struck Farris' car, which was moving in the opposite direction. The Braud car was hurled down the highway, overturning and pinning the young couple beneath. Mrs. Braud died en route to the hospital.
The victim formerly was Miss Wanda Louise Houston of Jamestown, Ind. She was a sophomore in the university. The couple was married Thursday at Wellington, Kas.

ILLINOIS TRADE LEADERS OPPOSE 30 HR. WEEK BILL

Trade leaders of Chicago yesterday opposed enactment into law of the Black bill which regulates hours of labor in the country. The bill to prohibit from interstate and foreign commerce articles and commodities produced in American mines, mills, quarries, canneries, workshops, factories, and manufacturing plants employing workers more than 5 days a week or 6 hours a day is an emergency measure carrying a two year limitation clause. The bill has already passed the senate.
Thomas S. Hammond, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, said that if the senate bill becomes a law it will work a hardship upon industries and workers alike. He declared the bill is inflexible in that it permits no overtime and makes no allowance for seasonal business.
C. G. Ferris, executive vice president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, said he is opposed to the bill because he believes the problem is one to be worked out by industry rather than by federal regulation.
The Chicago Association of Commerce has declared itself opposed to the bill.

FORCES FRANCE'S HAND

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
PARIS, April 7.—Premier Edouard Daladier conferred with former Premier Edouard Herriot tonight on the feasibility of the latter representing France at the Washington conference suggested by President Roosevelt. Their decision is yet to be announced, but one thing is apparent, and that is that President Roosevelt, by asking that Herriot be named to represent France, has forced the hand of the Daladier government.
Daladier and Herriot are hardly friends. Daladier's ministry still lives because the only man who could replace it—Herriot—is at loggerheads with the chamber of deputies over payment of the war debt. The chamber overthrew the Herriot government on Dec. 14 because he wanted to pay the debt.

See Herriot as Next Premier.
But Washington with unprecedented pointedness asked for Herriot, French press dispatches from Washington all harp on the same note—Herriot is so popular in America because he wanted to pay that he will be warmly received.

Daladier's hand was forced, but his feelings were spared: nobody mentioned the obvious, which is that, regardless of the situation of the moment, Herriot is the prime minister of tomorrow.
Most deputies insist that before Herriot could possibly go to Washington, he and the chamber will have to make peace. Only a week is left of the spring war debt debate to make this possible. Herriot's closest friends insist that such a showdown would be a prerequisite to his accepting the mission to give him the moral authority he will need, but a showdown is just what Daladier has been avoiding. But, all subtleties aside, Herriot wants to go and Daladier can send him if he wants to.

British Are Puzzled.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
LONDON, April 7.—Downing Street is puzzled by the news from Washington that President Roosevelt has invited French, German, Italian, and other statesmen to visit him at the same time that Prime Minister MacDonald is in the United States. British officials are wondering whether the prime minister is going to find that an international conference is being staged when he arrives in the American capital.
MacDonald was under the impression that he was invited for a personal talk with the President. This theory is based on the fact that both the present and the former administrations in Washington stressed the fact that war debts must be dealt with by each nation separately.
If, however, it proves that all the statesmen arrive in Washington together, it is difficult to see how MacDonald will be able to carry out his intention of returning to Britain on the Berengaria after only three or four days in Washington, and there is some talk here now of him making a longer stay.

Italy to Fight Payment.
ROME, April 7.—(AP)—The stand Italy will maintain at the world economic conference—and hence also at the preliminary discussions at Washington—was officially described today as based on a policy of "solid international collaboration."
At the same time warning was given that payment of international debts other than with merchandise and services is "unthinkable."

2 CUBAN YOUTHS SLAIN AFTER ARMY OFFICER IS SHOT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
HAVANA, Cuba, April 7.—(AP)—Jose Pau, military supervisor of Guanabacoa, Havana suburb, is near death tonight. He was fired upon by three student terrorists from a speeding car late yesterday. Five bullets lodged in his abdomen.
The terrorists escaped. Tonight the bullet riddled bodies of two unidentified youths were found by passersby four miles from Guanabacoa. Police later discovered an abandoned car containing two machine guns, 30 hand grenades and five army rifles. Opposition leaders tonight said the youths were killed by police in reprisal for the slaying of Maj. Pau.

Secretary of State Orestes Ferrera today charged that oppositionist headquarters in Miami had organized a "Superior Junta of Cuban National Opposition." He said Dr. Carlos de la Torre, former dean of Havana National university, had been elected president. Ferrera added that the junta had appointed a commission to visit President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull next week to request the United States officially to intervene in Cuban affairs.

"GROCERY STORE A-B-C's"

What food and grocery store items best fit the accompanying jingles?
Today the Chicago Tribune presents another game of "Grocery Store A-B-C's." It's loads of fun. There's no limit to the prizes—over $150.00 in groceries to reward successful contestants.
All you have to do is write in the names of a few grocery store and food items and state whether or not they are advertised in today's Tribune. Read the simple rules and start now!

THE RULES:
1. In the accompanying jingles certain words have been left out. You are invited to fill in the words you think best fit each jingle and try for the $150.00 in grocery prizes which the Tribune will pay.
2. To the persons who send in the best entries in accordance with these rules the Tribune will pay $150.00 in grocery orders drawn on any one of the stores listed above named by the winners. First prize, $25.00 in groceries; second prize, $15.00 in groceries; third prize, $10.00 in groceries; next ten prizes, $5.00 each in groceries; next 20 prizes, $2.50 each in groceries.
3. This offer is open to all except employees of the Tribune and their families. You pay nothing.
4. Awards will be made to the persons who send in the best entries. Each entry must consist of the ten jingles printed today. Simply fill in the words you think best fit the jingles. After you have written in your choices of missing words, check the food and grocery ads in today's Tribune and place a cross mark in the square if you find the item advertised in any of today's Tribune food and grocery ads. If the item is NOT advertised, make NO mark.
5. All entries will be considered by a committee appointed by the Tribune. Contestants agree to accept the decisions of the committee as final. Judgment will be based upon suitability of words inserted, accuracy in checking, and neatness. No special consideration will be given to duplicate entries. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded to tying contestants. Only one entry may be submitted by any one contestant.
6. Address your entry to "GROCERY STORE A-B-C's No. 11," Chicago Tribune, Postoffice Box 1720, Chicago, Ill. All entries to today's game must be received in the Tribune office before 6:00 p. m. on Wednesday, April 12, 1933. No entries will be returned.
7. You need not purchase the Tribune to compete. The Tribune may be examined at the Tribune offices or at public libraries free of charge. You may use the handy blank supplied here or you may submit your entry on a separate sheet of paper. Winners will be announced as soon as possible in the Tribune.

FIND McDONOUGH HAS ABANDONED TOUTED TAX PLAN

Decides He Won't Levy on Personal Property.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

County Treasurer McDonough's plan to force collection of delinquent real estate taxes by levying upon the personal property of the owners, brought forth about six weeks ago with considerable ballyhoo, has been abandoned, it was announced yesterday.

Instead the treasurer is waiting for the legislature to enact a bill, taken to Springfield by Attorney General Kerner and introduced last week, which will empower the County Judge to appoint the county treasurer receiver of any income producing property which has not paid its taxes. As receiver the treasurer would be empowered to collect rents to apply against tax bills. The fact that properties may already be in receivership or foreclosure would not bar the treasurer from taking them over, under the terms of the bill.

Approval of Installment Plan.

Meanwhile County Judge Jarecki held a conference at which final approval was given to the plan under which delinquent taxpayers may meet their unpaid 1928, 1929, and 1930 bills in installments extending to 1933.

The plan will be put in operation next week, and will give taxpayers, who are willing and able to pay, an opportunity of avoiding the harsher collection measures which Treasurer McDonough has talked about, but has failed to put into execution as yet. J. Sule Watterfield, ex-president of the Chicago Real Estate board, was present at the conference and promised Judge Jarecki that the board will be able to sign up under the installment plan property owners whose delinquent bills total $50,000,000 or more.

McDonough Sought in Vain.

Treasurer McDonough could not be found about the county building yesterday, the announcement of his change in plans coming from his attorney, Thomas D. Nash. Apologists for the treasurer have recently said that political moorings and his own tender heart have made him a virtual exile from the office he was elected to administer. Every time he appears there, his friends say, he is besieged with requests for small personal loans which he finds himself unable to refuse.

It was Mr. Nash who unearthed the statute under which the treasurer may levy on a property owner's personal property if he fails to pay his real estate tax bills. The original discovery was accompanied by the announcement that the treasurer would take action immediately. The action, however, was delayed for one reason and another.

May Want to Run Again.

Mr. Nash said yesterday that Mr. McDonough felt that it would have been unfair to start action under the law during the early weeks of March while the banking moratorium was in effect. One possible reason for the inaction, advanced now by Mr. McDonough but by political observers, is that the treasurer will probably want to run for some other office when his present term ends, and thus is unwilling to alienate voters by too drastic methods of tax collection.

County Attorney Hayden N. Bell cooperated with Attorney General Kerner in drafting the measure permitting public receiverships for tax delinquent properties. Mr. Bell's staff, however, would give the County Judge discretion in naming the receiver, while the attorney general's draft names the county treasurer as receiver in the proceedings.

Want County's Share of Rent.

"Bondholders' committees, receivers and trustees now in possession of thousands of properties collect their rents," said Mr. Bell, "but they dispose of them in their own way, and usually among themselves. So far as the county is concerned there is no money in the dry fee to property—the bare title. It is from the income alone that taxes can be paid. Since they are a superior and prior lien, the county treasurer can take control, either where another receiver has already been appointed, or in new cases."

Attorney Nash, who has seen Treasurer McDonough recently, said that the treasurer told him that there is no opposition to the bill in the legislature, that Gov. Horner is in favor of it, and that enough votes can be mustered to pass it as an emergency measure within the next two weeks.

1931 Penalty Date Falls Today.

Today is the penalty date for the first installment of 1931 real estate taxes. The date, originally set at March 15, was extended by the order of Judge John P. McCorty in injunction proceedings brought before him in the Superior court by the Chicago Real Estate board. Payments received by mail bearing cancellation dates not later than midnight tonight will avoid penalties.

The treasurer's office reported yesterday that 1931 tax collections up to Wednesday evening totaled $58,572,667. This is exclusive of $2,000,000 or more in personal property tax collections, but includes payments on the second installment of their 1931 taxes which were made by thousands of small home owners.

It was estimated that the first installment collections alone amount to $50,000,000. This is 56 per cent of the total installment due, which is $89,957,702, and taking the first installment alone is a better collection record than was made on the penalty date of the 1930 levy. If there is any rush of late minute payments, the collections on the first installment may even equal those at the penalty date.

STATE TAX BOARD PONDERES 15% CUT ON CHICAGO HOMES

Springfield, Ill., April 7.—[Special.]—The Illinois tax commission was in session in this city all of today considering the evidence in the case involving a 15 per cent real estate tax cut affecting small homes in Cook county, ordered by the board of review.

Chairman Scott Lucas said tonight that a decision probably would be given tomorrow. After the order of the board of review Assessor Jacob of Cook county refused to comply with the order and a large amount of evidence was heard later by members of the state tax commission.

on the 1929 taxes, collected two years ago.

Improvement Over 1930. Payments up to the penalty date were 48.22 per cent on the 1930 levy and 59 per cent on the 1929 levy. On the 1928 levy, when Cook county's real difficulties in tax collections started, they were 76 per cent. These collections, however, were for the full levy and not a half installment. Total collections to date are only 32.5 per cent of the total taxes extended against real estate for 1931.

There is considerable doubt whether all the taxpayers who have met their first installment bills will be able to pay when the second installment falls due later this year. The unrest incited by the board of tax appeals' order to cut assessments on homes and small flat buildings, with the dispute which followed, may also have an adverse effect on tax payments. It is feared.

Illinois Has 7,266,361

Whites, 328,972 Negroes

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(AP)—The bureau of census announced today that Illinois' population of 7,266,361 was divided as follows: White, 7,266,361; Negro, 238,972; Mexican, 25,908; Indian, 469; Chinese, 3,192; Japanese, 564; Filipino, 2,011; all other, 179. The total native population is 6,888,207, while the foreign born population is 1,242,447.

Want County's Share of Rent.

"Bondholders' committees, receivers and trustees now in possession of thousands of properties collect their rents," said Mr. Bell, "but they dispose of them in their own way, and usually among themselves. So far as the county is concerned there is no money in the dry fee to property—the bare title. It is from the income alone that taxes can be paid. NEWSPAPER MEN HOLD UP A BILL TO CENSOR PRESS

Tell Senate They Object to 10 Year Sentence.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., April 7.—It was only a timely squawk by some of the young journalists in the senate press gallery which averted the passage of the proposed law to censor all of the American newspapers.

This bill has been passed by the house, but has been held up in the senate thanks to the journalists who apprehended that under its provisions they might get ten years in jail for printing the White House menu without formal permission. What with the depression era and mishaps to the Washington banks, ten years in some good government jail would seem less a threat than an invitation to some of the journalists. Nevertheless, the squawk was made that blocked the bill in the upper house.

Few Questions Asked.

It seems that the house passed the censorship bill automatically and without even inquiring what it meant.

Nowadays, under discipline the boys are not much given to asking questions or arguing. The Democrats do as they are requested because if they don't they will not get the jobs which they hope to get for the deserving Democrats who helped elect them. If they do not get these jobs the deserving Democrats will not help them get elected again. So the boys do as they are told. The Republicans, on the other hand, refrain from serious opposition in the hope that some of the laws proposed by the Democratic administration will turn out to be terrible laws and will arouse the citizens against the present administration three and a half years from now.

The censorship law, as I am given to understand, was sent over by the state department with an intimation that the boys were to ask no questions, but just pass it. The state department wished to protect its own secret communications and also to obtain protection for the secret messages of the foreign ambassadors in Washington which are written in code.

Among governments it is considered unethical to intercept the secret messages of ambassadors and break down the codes in which they are written, although, to be sure, this is done right along by some governments which are curious to know what the foreign ambassadors really think about them.

Habeas Corpus Mandamus.

The phrase "habeas corpus mandamus potestas," for instance, might be translated by a good code expert into a message reading, "This country's army couldn't lick its weight in guinea pigs and its battleships shoot nothing but out curves, so I think we ought to declare war on it right away. I had tea with the prime minister this afternoon and kissed his wife on the hand and told her she was the fairest flower in the land, although she has a turkey neck and her face would scare a pig. Please send over some experts to blow up all the canals, ditches and bridges in case you decide to act on my suggestion."

Just why the state department was so anxious for a law to prevent the publication of broken down code messages out of the government archives at this particular time does not officially appear, but there is a story around which some of the journalists have told me to the effect that some former employes of this government was going to print a book made up of such material.

Any Code Can Be Solved.

The author used to amuse himself playing with codes which are like crossword puzzles. Just as it is said that nobody will ever invent a bullet-proof armor plate because the ordinance people can always invent a little stronger gun to blow it full of holes, so also it is maintained that the insoluble code has never been devised and never will be. What human ingenuity can do in this respect, human ingenuity can also undo.

In time of war, of course, or when war is seriously believed to impend, it is all right to intercept diplomatic messages and decode them for the information they may contain. But in peace times this is considered reprehensible. It would be very embarrassing if a book were to come out giving a foreign ambassador's frank, unreserved opinions of various persons, issues and conditions in the United States, and obviously it would help matters and simplify the problems of the state department if congress would pass a law providing ten years in prison for any one who should write or publish such a book.

But the present bill went so far as to provide ten years in jail for any one who should publish any matter obtained without authorization of competent authority from the custody of any employee or officer of the United States. This was the part of the bill which aroused the squawk in the press gallery and caused the diversion of the bill to a subcommittee for delousing and rearrangement. The statements are not really to blame for passing this censorship bill in the house or for missing the hidden point of it in the senate until the journalists showed it to them. They just were not thinking. If in this period of national emergency anybody should manage to slip in a bill to give the country back to the British that would be just too bad, unless the journalists should catch it and raise a timely squawk.

Divorces Wife He Rewed After She Divorced Him

Max A. Wojtan, 3115 Logan boulevard, son of Stanley Wojtan, well-to-do contractor, won a divorce on grounds of cruelty yesterday before Judge Joseph Sabath. Mrs. Wojtan divorced him on the same charge in December, 1931, and they were remarried last November. Suits totaling $250,000 which she filed against the elder Wojtan, charging alienation of affections, at the time of her divorce, were settled when she was remarried. Custody of twin daughters, 3 years old, was given yesterday to Mrs. Mary Keller, Mrs. Wojtan's mother.

Another Suit Attacks State Tax on Sales

Springfield, Ill., April 7.—[Special.]—The second attack on the state sales tax was made here today before Circuit Judge L. E. Stone.

Remarks by the judge, who took the case under advisement, indicated his suspicion that this was a typical test case brought by friendly interests. Only brief arguments were made.

Attorney General Otto Kerner appeared in court with an assistant, Montgomery S. Winnick, who presented the argument for the state. The arguments were short. In this instance the complainant seeks an injunction to restrain state officials from acting under the new sales tax law.

A temporary injunction has not been asked in the local case, because Circuit Judge Jesse R. Brown of Madison county already has filed a temporary writ in a case filed there.

IF IT'S A FAIR QUESTION, ASK ANY 1933 GUIDE

Their Handsome Heads
Are Full of Lore.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Installation of one section of chemistry exhibits was completed yesterday in the Hall of Science on the exposition grounds and exposition guards got down to work in earnest on their study of chemistry.

To be a guard, or guide, one of the 70 blue uniformed youths who "know all and tell all" at A Century of Progress, it is necessary among other things to be familiar with the groundwork of chemistry, physics, and biology, to say nothing of smelting, mining, manufacturing, breeding cattle, and such odds and ends as modern architecture and landscape gardening.

Guard Knows His Onions.

"It's awfully big, but what does it mean?" a member of a visiting delegation from Kalamazoo asked a guide, looking upward from the southern terrace of the Hall of Science.

"It is very dynamic, modern," he replied firmly, and continued to point out how true of modern architecture this was. "This building covers 9-13 acres, including the terraces. It is built of structural steel over which is five-ply wood."

The Kalamazoo woman gave him a searching glance, explained that she had to give a lecture for her club when she got home, inquired how the geometric designs decorating one wall should be described, and departed. The guide then escorted reporters through the new chemistry exhibits within the building.

It's All Quite Simple.

"Here you see how chemical separation by means of electricity works," he said. "It is simple. It explains itself. The electric arc passes from one pole to another. Here you have mercuric oxide. But the mercury drops from the negative electrode and the oxygen is released at the positive electrode contact."

"We pass on to another simple exhibit. When it is in motion it is even simpler. When carbon, potassium, and sulphur are mixed there is an explosion. That is, gunpowder is formed. The explosion explains the chemical change."

A diorama showed how sulphur is mined. A Texas field with typical background designed in proportion showed how boiling hot water is pumped down a shaft into a deep vein of sulphur, which is dissolved and lifted to the surface by pressure. The liquid sulphur is then pumped into large bins to be dried and crystallized.

A Hand Picked Bunch.

This is only one small part of the information a guard must emit promptly when asked. Most of the guards are college men, albeit usually undergraduates.

"They are carefully picked for appearance, personality, and intelligence," said Charles H. Thurman of the operation department, who trains the guards. "We have many applicants and can require a high standard. Before the fair is over we may put on 1,000 guides, but we will not need any more until June 1."

A guard must also be intelligent; also, he must be good looking, and of almost equal importance, said Mr. Thurman, he must be courteous and patient.

5 Slain, 12 Wounded in Clashes at Mexican Town

MEXICO CITY, April 7.—(AP)—Five persons were killed and twelve others suffered gunshot and knife wounds in clashes today between rival groups in Tlalpam, 30 miles from here. The cause of the fights was not learned.

2 MINERS SLAIN, CHILD MAY DIE IN MINING WAR

Pair Killed as They Resist Arrest.

Duquoin, Ill., April 7.—(Special.)—Two members of the Progressive Miners' union are dead and a 14-year-old girl is in a hospital critically wounded as the result of new violence in this coal mining region last night and today. These deaths brought the aggregate of killings in southern Illinois nine union warfare to 13.

Henry Arnold of Duquoin was fatally shot and James Ates of Herrin slain outright today at Arnold's home when deputy sheriffs went there to arrest the pair for questioning in connection with firing on homes here last night from an automobile.

Lavern Miller, a schoolgirl, daughter of Vernon Miller, who has been serving as a special deputy sheriff, was wounded as she sat in her home last night and may not live. She was shot through the right lung.

Homes Raked by Bullets.

Shortly before 9 o'clock last night an automobile containing five men, whose identity has not been definitely established, swept through the town, firing a number of volleys. Bullets raked the homes of Arthur Weford and "Silk" Kennedy, who had been serving as deputies, as well as Miller's.

Deputy Howard Rheingans headed the officers who went to Arnold's home this morning. They found Ates concealed in a closet, Rheingans said, and when he attempted to fire on the deputies the officers shot, and both Ates and Arnold were killed. Rheingans was shot through the hand and was taken to a hospital here.

A coroner's jury which investigated the shooting returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Miner Is Arrested.

Later in the day, Emory Albers, local Progressive miner, was taken into custody charged with being owner of car used by men in last night's attack. He was questioned by local police and state highway patrolmen and is reported to have given names of men who did the shooting.

Statements implicating five men were obtained from four suspects in the shooting of the girl, M. K. Grabowski, assistant attorney general and acting as Perry county state's attorney, said tonight.

A force of deputy sheriffs last night raided Progressive headquarters here and closed the place. Feeling is tense here tonight over the probable fatal wounding of Miller's child and state patrolmen and deputy sheriffs are being held in readiness in case of any new outbreak.

Five Are Arrested.

Benton, Ill., April 7.—(Special.)—Pete Rybicki, 24; Walter Rachowicz, 26; West City; Francis Helinski, 23; Charles Nowotowski, 22; Benton, and John Miles, 43, of Zeigler were jailed here today, charged with intimidating miners who want to work. Aime Handeguan, 28, Coello, arrested Wednesday night, charged with scattering tactics in highways, was released from jail on bond.

ROGER KAHN, SON OF BANKER, WEDS A SECOND TIME

New York, April 7.—(Special.)—Roger Wolfe Kahn, son of Otto H. Kahn, today married Miss Edith May Nelson, daughter of former Congressman and Mrs. John E. Nelson, according to an announcement from the Kahn home.

The announcement said only that: "Ex-Congressman and Mrs. John E. Nelson of Augusta, Me., announce the marriage of their daughter, Edith May, to Roger W. Kahn of New York, on Friday, April 7."

This is Mr. Kahn's second marriage. His first wife sued for divorce at Reno on Tuesday and the case was heard in court Wednesday. No alimony was asked.

For several years Roger Wolfe Kahn has figured as a leader of orchestras in revues and night clubs.

MUSSOLINI AND KING PUT O. K. ON EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Italy Ready to Send 400
Displays to Chicago.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

ROME, April 7.—King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini have inspected and approved the collection of scientific and historical material prepared by the national council of research for the Italian pavilion at A Century of Progress exposition in Chicago. It is now ready for shipment to the United States.

Great interest has been shown in the exhibits and Guglielmo Marconi, president of the research council, who personally supervised its preparation, has ordered the exhibit placed on view here for several days before shipment. Italy's exhibit promises to be one of the most attractive at the fair. Its models and reproductions of the various instruments and objects which have nursed mankind from barbarity to civilization will present a complete panorama of the development of the arts and sciences in the Italian peninsula. Copies have been made of various inventions, instruments of famous scientists, relics in museums, and also of precious manuscripts and documents.

Model of Caesar's Bridge.

Visitors will see daggers and vases of the Terracotta period, 800-500 B.C.; the model of the bridge which Caesar built over the Rhine, Leonardo da Vinci's design for a flying machine, Galileo's scientific instruments, Volta's battery, Marconi's first radio transmitting instrument, and the first compressed air drill used in excavating the Montecenis tunnel between France and Italy.

The collection is aimed principally to show the richness of the contribution by Italian genius to progress in the use of tools and the arts. It covers the field of agriculture, public building construction, irrigation and drainage, military art, communications, astronomy, physics, chemistry, medicine, hygiene, and the natural sciences.

The exhibits total more than 400 models and copies of historical machines and implements.

Italy's pavilion at the fair is the work of the young architects Valente, Libera, and Renzi, who designed the facade of the Exposition of the Fascist Revolution, now open in Rome.

Thirty Room Pavilion.

It will have from 25 to 30 rooms. A large central reception room will show motion pictures of the work being done in reclaiming land and the development of the handicrafts. Marconi said he planned "to have the exposition tell the tumultuous story of Italian genius."

In the first rooms will be placed the exhibits of prehistoric times, instruments and objects of the Terracotta period when men lived in houses built of piles will be shown. Models of Etruscan tombs also will be on display.

The second room will house models of a Roman road, Caesar's bridge, fortifications for the siege of Alesia, where Caesar first used the swinging battering ram. Subsequent rooms will exhibit models of engineering feats from Roman times such as the Cloaca maxima, or great sewer, Trajan's gate, the famous aqueducts and ships such as those found in Lake Nemi. Models of medieval military fortifications will be shown together with Leonardo da Vinci's design of a locomotive, his anatomical sketches, and compasses.

One room will be devoted to studies and books of Italian missionaries and commercial travelers. They will show how travelers like Marco Polo taught the art of mapmaking to the Chinese.

Another room will be devoted to medical discoveries. The Italians claim that Galileo, not Harvey, discovered the circulation of the blood. Reproductions of anatomical sketches of the fifth and sixteenth centuries will be exhibited. The largest room of all is under the cupola. There will be shown apparatus with which Marconi conducted his first experiments, the periscope for submarines, invented by G. Russi, Laurenti's early cars of Caproni and Savoia-Marchetti, the Venetian motor boat of Isotta Fraschini; a model of the Dullio, the first battleship with an iron hull, together with a model of the first marine torpedo with which the ship Viribus Unitis was sunk.

HANDS SELF IN CELL.

Joseph Macchioni, 42 years old, 1911 West 18th street, hanged himself yesterday in a cell in the Marquette police station. He had been arrested a short time before on charges that he was too attentive to another man's wife.

MAYOR MURPHY TO BE GOVERNOR OF PHILIPPINES

Cummings Will Remain
Attorney General.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., April 7.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt disclosed today that he is striving to complete his program of domestic measures so that in two weeks he will be free to enter into his discussions of world problems with the leaders of foreign powers.

The President, at a conference this evening, was reported to have completed his plans for a widespread development at Muscle Shoals. He also let it be known that during the coming week he will submit to congress his plan for relieving the mortgage interest burden on home owners.

Rail Problem Up Monday.

The railroad problem is giving the President and his advisers cause for worry, but he has hopes of gaining a decision on a plan next Monday evening at a conference at the White House with Secretaries Roper and Woodin and Commerce Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman. It is reported that Mr. Eastman may be given the duty of coordinating the services of the railroads to eliminate wasteful duplications. Another report that Donald R. Richberg, counsel for the railway unions, may get a major federal railway post was discounted. Mr. Roosevelt said Richberg would not attend the Monday evening conference.

Murphy to Run Islands.

Mr. Roosevelt announced that Mayor Frank Murphy of Detroit would be named governor general of the Philippines. Homer Cummings, who had been slated to take the job, will remain as attorney general, the post he was hurriedly impressed into because of the sudden death of Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana.

Lawrence Wood ("Chip") Robert of Atlanta will be named, the President revealed, as assistant secretary of the treasury, succeeding Perry K. Heath in charge of public works. Mr. Robert will have supervision over the extensive public works relief program contemplated by the administration.

After Arthur Mullen, national committee chairman from Nebraska, turned down the federal judgeship offered by the President, Mr. Roosevelt offered a post to Arthur Mullen Jr., who accepted. He will be an assistant legal adviser, assigned to Assistant Secretary of State Raymond Moley and to the White House.

Muscle Shoals Plans.

The Muscle Shoals development was discussed with the President by Senator George Norris (Radical, Neb.), father of the project, and other members of congress active in its promotion. Senator Norris said after the conference that an agreement had been reached, and that the bill he has submitted, proposing government operation of the power project, would be modified slightly.

The modified Muscle Shoals legislation would create a "Tennessee valley authority" with which an annual appropriation of $50,000,000 would undertake reforestation in that valley, the improvement of farm lands, and a general agricultural, electric power and industrial development. Work will be started on the Cove creek dam which is intended to retain head waters to assure a year round flow at Wilson dam. Senator Norris said the bill would provide for an "experimental operation" of the Muscle Shoals fertilizer plants.

Farm problems were discussed by the President with former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Secretary Wallace, Bernard M. Baruch of New York and George N. Peek of Moline, Ill. Mr. Peek, a farm leader who aided the President during his campaign, is reported to be slated for an important post in the agriculture department, to assist Secretary Wallace in putting the provisions of the pending farm bill into effect.

She left Vientiane at 7 a. m. today, after landing there at 6 p. m. yesterday from Calcutta.

STATE'S CASE IN CITY STATE BANK TRIAL NEAR END

The state's case against Seymour Steidman and four other former officials of the defunct City State bank who are charged with accepting deposits while the bank was insolvent neared a close yesterday in Judge Francis B. Allgrett's court. Evidence will probably be concluded Monday by Representatives of the receiver, Abel Davis, will testify for the state today as to the condition of the bank before closing as revealed by their investigation of the assets and liabilities.

Most of yesterday was spent in a reading to the jury of minutes of the directors' meetings in the bank from 1924 to 1929. Assistant State's Attorney Earle Hurley, who read the minutes, said the purpose of this reading was to show the jury that the directors were present at all meetings and that the defendants had full knowledge of the condition of the bank long before its closing.

Former Captain

IN ITALIAN NAVY

GIVEN 3 YEARS

Anthony Pugliese, 38 years old, a retired captain in the Royal Italian navy, was sentenced yesterday by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson to serve three years at Leavenworth penitentiary for violation of the immigration law. The government charged that Pugliese, a former foreign exchange clerk at the Scott bank at Brooklyn, was involved in the falsification of the immigration records of 25 men, most of them Italian seamen, who entered the country illegally. Assistant United States Attorney Francis J. Kennedy said Pugliese received $300 from each of the men. Pugliese, who pleaded guilty to the charge, was traced through a defective letter "e" on his typewriter.

Ablin and Three Others

Booked on Threat Charges

David (Cockeyed) Mulligan, Ablin and three others were booked by police late yesterday on charges of intimidation by threat. They were arrested in a raid on offices at 64 West Randolph street shared by the Chicago Service Station Operators' association and the Chicago Public Garage Operators' association. The other defendants are Ray Keenan, Frank Altmeier, and William Howland, membership solicitors for the Service Station Operators' association. The raid was on complaint of George Geller, 1955 Leaminth avenue, who said he was threatened for having stopped payment of "dues" to the association.

DELAYED 'CHUTE JUMPS TO THRILL AIR RACE CROWDS

Acrobatic Pilots Added to List of Entrants.

On each of the four days of the American air races, to be staged at Chicago Municipal airport on July 1, 2, 3, and 4, two well known aviation stunt performers will jump from a plane at an altitude of 11,000 feet and delay opening their parachutes until they have fallen 10,000 feet. This act was added to the program of the races yesterday by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, director of events.

The two parachute jumpers are Clem Shon of East Lansing, Mich., and Lieut. E. Verne Stewart of Dundee, Ill. The delayed drop is a thrilling performance, perhaps the most exciting of all the events at large air races, Maj. Schroeder said.

Falls at 118 Miles an Hour.

"A person falling freely through space attains a terminal velocity of between 118 and 120 miles an hour, according to the best data we can obtain," he said. "That speed, once reached, is not exceeded, no matter how far the person falls. The old theory that a person who jumps from a great height dies before he reaches the earth has been disproven by these delayed opening parachute jumps."

In addition to the two parachute jumpers two well known acrobatic pilots and an experienced racing pilot were added yesterday by Maj. Schroeder to the list of performers who will participate in the American Air Races, bringing the entries three months before the races to twelve. The four day spectacle is sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Capt. Richard Graner, who flew with the Canadian Royal Air Force during the war and the only American pilot to emulate the "crazy flying" of Flight Commander R. L. R. Atcherley of Great Britain, has perfected a new act, which he will perform publicly for the first time at the American air races, he has informed Maj. Schroeder.

Will Show New Stunts.

Vincent C. Taylor, former British Royal Air Force instructor, who learned "crazy flying" with Atcherley, is developing a performance that will be seen for the first time at the American air races.

Herman Hamer of La Salle, Ill., a racing pilot of considerable experience, who flew a Laird racer in last year's large events, has entered the competitions. His plane is a smaller model of the record breaking Laird Solution racer and is powered by a Warner motor.

Five Bandits Line Up 30

in a Woolworth Store

Five bandits armed with revolvers lined 20 customers and ten employees against the wall of the Woolworth store, 1443 Fullerton avenue, yesterday and escaped with an undetermined amount of money. While two of the robbers guarded the clerks and customers the others looted a dozen cash registers and the office safe.

HARRIMAN MUST

APPEAR IN COURT

DESPITE ILLNESS

New York, April 7.—[Special.]—After a heavy argument concerning the physical condition of Joseph W. Harriman, former head of the Harriman National bank, who was indicted yesterday on fourteen counts of making false entries in the books of the bank, Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman today ordered that the banker be brought to court for arraignment next Monday morning.

The judge made his ruling after consulting Dr. Howard P. Shattuck, Harriman's personal physician, and learning that Harriman, since his attack of coronary thrombosis, a heart ailment, on Dec. 3, had recovered sufficiently to be able to move about his home.

"If he is able to get about the house," he said, "he is able to come to court."

Harriman's attorney, George S. Leisner, presented affidavits from Dr. Shattuck and two other physicians in which it was stated that any physical or mental strain might bring on another attack to Mr. Harriman.

HORNER RECEIVES

DELEGATION OF 20

FROM IDLE GROUP

Springfield, Ill., April 7.—[Special.]—Efforts of the idle to invade Springfield today proved a failure. Instead of an army of a delegation of 20 reached Gov. Horner's office.

With state, city, and county police on the alert in adjoining territory, there were only those few that broke through the barricades thrown up against them. Those 20 reached the governor's office, received courteous treatment, and were assured that their proposals would be accorded thorough consideration. But there was no further demonstration.

The delegation which Gov. Horner received presented a four page typewritten statement of its demands on unemployment insurance, including a copy of a bill on the subject, and were told that their insistence would receive proper consideration at the hands of the legislature.

SHELL'S NEW DEAL!

Super SHELL

"SHALL I FILL YOUR TANK WITH THE NEW SUPER SHELL, SIR?
IT HAS NO THREE CENT
PREMIUM, NOW!"

Super SHELL

Never before at less than a 3¢ premium

now at the price of ordinary gas

TODAY, Super Shell gasoline is again on sale at all Shell service stations—and it is even better than ever!

283,792,796 gallons of this famous motor fuel have been bought by motorists—every one of whom paid 3¢ extra per gallon for its premium qualities—a total of $8,513,783.88 above the regular price.

Now, for the first time, Super Shell gasoline is offered at the price of ordinary gasoline.

This is Shell's New Deal.

You Save 3¢ a Gallon Premium

You motorists—112,327 of you—have told us, when we asked you in our service stations and in your homes, that you want gasoline that is economical to purchase and economical to use. A gasoline that gives good mileage . . . power and pick-up, that starts quickly and has a high anti-knock value.

Super Shell has all these qualities. In particular, it gives you good mileage.

By a special precision process of refining Super Shell, the Shell Petroleum Corporation has succeeded in eliminating the waste parts of a gasoline that reduce mileage and increase operating costs.

Super Shell gives you, in concentrated form, only those parts of a gasoline which your engine needs to operate efficiently and economically.

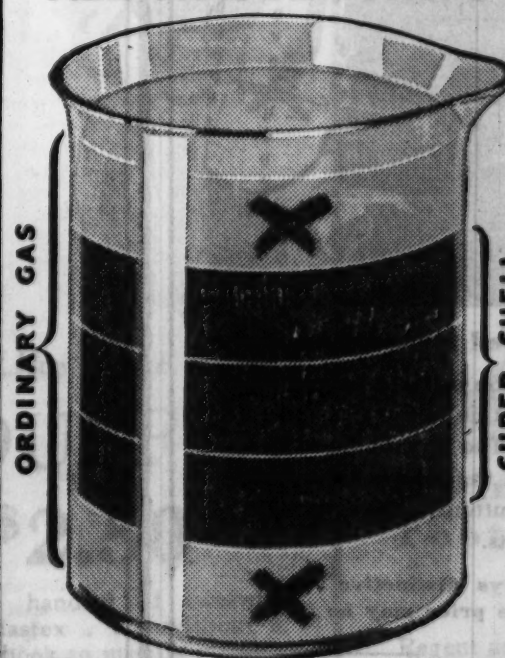

You get the parts to give you real mileage and quick pick-up. You get the quick-starting parts so your engine will start without wasteful choking. You get real anti-knock parts to prevent your engine from knocking on hills and in traffic. For Super Shell has a higher anti-knock rating than any gasoline to which ethyl has not been added.

Change to Super Shell

Super Shell is colored golden for your protection. Results will prove its economy for you.

• If you prefer an ethylized gasoline, it is obtainable under the name of Super-Shell Ethyl—an improved gasoline with ethyl added. A double premium gasoline at a single premium price.

ALL WASTE PARTS REMOVED

Gassy Parts—That evaporate before they burn. Removed by SHELL'S method of refining.

Quick-starting Parts—That explode instantly and start your engine without wasteful "choking." Kept by SHELL.

Power Parts—That give your engine when under way instant pick-up and driving power. Kept by SHELL.

Anti-knock Parts—That prevent your engine from knocking in traffic and on hills. Kept by SHELL.

Sluggish Parts—That dilute your oil or blow unused from your exhaust. Removed by SHELL.

FEAR TEACHERS' CASH PAY DAY IS FACING A DELAY

May Await Organization of New Council.

Fear arose yesterday that the promised cash pay day for school employees may have to wait for organization of the new city council and the first meeting of that body, now scheduled for April 17.

City and school officials held an extended conference yesterday afternoon, but broke up with no announcement except that they "hope" to get money soon for the school employees who have had only a month's salary in cash since the schools opened last fall and nothing but several weeks' pay in tax warrants since the first of the year.

Validity of Cor's Signature.

Legal objections to the validity of Acting Mayor Cor's signature on tax warrants are responsible for the expected delay in the pay day. Bankers, it is understood, are willing to buy $1,000,000 worth of warrants, which would give teachers a week's pay and civil service employees two weeks' pay. The warrants which they would purchase are now held in the city's aggregate of funds. There is no doubt of their validity, but they bear only 4 per cent interest, while the bankers demand 6 per cent. To complete the transaction it would be necessary either to release the warrants at a higher rate of interest or attach additional interest coupons to them. Either method would require the signature of the acting mayor.

Acting Mayor Cor, Corporation Counsel Sexton, Controller Symmes, City Treasurer Kearns, and President Taylor of the school board met yesterday afternoon, announcing that they were awaiting word from Melvin A. Traylor, spokesman for the banks. They did not hear from him, it was understood, because he, in turn, was waiting for an opinion on the legality of the proposed tax warrant transaction from Attorney Henry E. Cutler, authority on municipal securities.

Unofficially, it was said that Mr. Cutler believes that a council meeting will be necessary to validate the tax warrant transfer. Aside from the fact that the council has not been organized, a number of its members are out of the city and it is doubtful whether a quorum could be called if a meeting were called at once.

Believes Council Must Act.

The strike of high school pupils, called ostensibly in sympathy with the unpaid teachers but which Superintendent of Schools Bogan said was partly the result of communist agitation, petered out yesterday. Attendance was little below normal averages and all of the pupils will be back in their classes Monday, school authorities predicted.

Meyer Observes 19th Year as County Hospital Head

Dr. Karl A. Meyer yesterday celebrated his nineteenth year as medical superintendent of the county hospital. Dr. Meyer was appointed in 1914 when the hospital had 1,500 beds. There are now 2,500 beds. "Few persons know the hours of work given and the personal sacrifice made by surgeons and physicians to charity cases here," Dr. Meyer said yesterday. "The loyalty of my staff is the most gratifying thing in my life."

LAST MOMENTS ON AKRON TOLD BY SURVIVORS

One Saw Craft Break Before Crash.

I swam up to it and asked who the men were. Erwin replied his name, Copeland replied his name, and then again asked who the other man was. Erwin then replied, "Rutan." He did not answer.

"Approximately a half hour later I sighted a ship and told them on the tank that there was a ship in sight and for them to try and paddle toward it.

They finally got the life boat in the water, loaded Copeland in and then myself and then I do not remember anything further until I awoke in bed in the German tanker."

Erwin Tells His Story.

Then Metamorph Erwin told his version. "It was a blind plunge through the fabric which shrouded the Akron's frame which saved Erwin. He, too, was called out of his bunk.

"I heard the tall hit the water," he told the committee, "and when it hit the water the lighting system broke and the lights went out. When the lights went out I jumped through the cover. The bow had not hit the water but the tall had."

Chairman Delaney asked whether there was an opening in the cover.

"No, sir," was the reply, "it was just fabric. I jumped through the fabric between the diagonal wires, ripping the fabric as I went through.

Hit Water at Same Time.

"By the time I hit the water the ship seemed to hit at the same time, that is, it seemed right on top of me. I put my foot against the structure and shoved myself down underneath the water and dived out from under."

JANET GAYNOR TELLS QUARRELS; WINS DIVORCE

Says Husband Drank and Called Her Stupid.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 7.—[Special.]—Divorce was granted to Janet Gaynor, movie star, from Lyndell Peck, writer for the talkies.

Peck, Miss Gaynor, a former Chicago girl, told Judge C. L. Shinn, up-set her nerves and interfered with her work by his criticisms, uttered before her friends. He called her stupid, she said, for working late at the studio, and she was so nervous her work suffered the next day.

He was jealous, she added, and that disturbed her artistic poise; he spoke abusively to her at parties and drank more than he should.

They were married Sept. 11, 1929, and separated Dec. 14, 1932. Neither wanted any share in the earnings of the other as the result of current court action. Lawyers declared a property settlement had been reached.

Criticism Upsets Nerves.

Miss Gaynor married Peck when he was an attorney in Oakland. She helped him in Hollywood, where he became an executive at her studio, she told the judge. The studio incident she described began when Peck asked why she had been so late.

"I told him I was working at the studio and that the director asked me to stay," she testified. "He said I was stupid and it was foolish for me to stay. I worried about it and it injured my film work."

Janet also testified her husband often spoke to her rudely and sharply. "and I would get so nervous I would cry and couldn't sleep."

Mrs. Laura Jones, her mother, said that once while the three of them were dining a film was mentioned. Peck jumped up from the table, swore, threw down his napkin and, leaving the room, slammed the door.

Dancer Asks for Divorce.

Sada Lund, blonde dancer, today filed suit for divorce against Sidney Lund, movie picture technician, and charged desertion, nonsupport, and cruelty. Mrs. Lund also made it known she has dropped a $25,000 alienation of affection action against Dorothy Janis, beautiful young motion picture actress.

Walker and Miss Compton Set Wedding for April 13

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

CANNES, France, April 7.—The date of the marriage of James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, and Betty Compton, former actress, has been tentatively fixed for the morning of April 13. Michael Arlen, who is Miss Compton's neighbor, and Norma Shearer, who at present is sunning herself at Cap d'Antibes, are understood to be the couple's choices as witnesses.

Russian Scientist Claims Way to Control Sex of Animals

MOSCOW, April 7.—(AP)—Artificial regulation of sex in the reproduction of certain animal life is claimed to have been accomplished by Prof. Nikolai Konstantinovich Koltzoff, founder and head of the Moscow Institute of Animal Breeding.

The discovery, which the professor hopes later to apply to all domestic mammals, consists of separating by electrical treatment the male and female elements of the spermatozoa and then impregnating females by injecting a solution containing the opposite of whichever sex is desired in the offspring.

Isolation of the two sexes in the spermatozoa provided the chief problem of the experiments, which were begun a year ago with rabbits.

Elements React to Electricity.

Having ascertained that male and female elements in spermatozoa react differently to electric current, Prof. Koltzoff employed what is termed the "Michaelis apparatus," consisting of a horseshoe-shaped tube divided into three sections.

Natural spermatozoa were deposited in the curved end and the tube was filled with a special "physiological solution," one of the chief elements in the discovery, to which a slight electric current was applied for two hours.

This caused the male elements to draw to the anodes, or the side where the current enters the tube, and the females to the cathodes, where the current leaves. After this process some of the original spermatozoa, containing a mixture of both sexes, still was left.

Experiments on Rabbits.

Three female rabbits then were artificially impregnated with the resultant solutions—the first with the male or anodic spermatozoa, the second with the female or cathodic, and the third with the original residue.

The first bore six females, the second four males and one female, and the third two males and two females. The fact that the second bore one

MONEYPENNYMAY BE MADE STATE'S CHIEF OF PRISONS

David Moneypenny, warden of the Cook county jail, was reported yesterday as favored for the appointment as state superintendent of prisons. It was also reported that George F. Seiring, a former mayor of Joliet, probably would be named warden of the state penitentiary at Joliet. Seiring has the backing of Joliet Democrats and it is said that his candidacy is favored by Gov. Horner. The present warden, Frank D. Whipple, was appointed during the Republican administration of former Gov. Louis Emmerson. Frank Kneas, a former deputy warden of the penitentiary, is understood to be under consideration for return to the same position.

Youngsters love the flavor of this nourishing food

WHERE does a healthy boy get his energy?—He eats it. Kellogg's PEP Bran Flakes are food for active appetites and agile bodies. Made of wheat. Full of flavor. Packed with goodness. The proteins. Vitamins. Minerals. And with enough bran to be mildly laxative.

Children and active grown-ups love the toasted crispness of better bran flakes. Delicious with milk or cream. Sliced fruit or honey adds wholesome variety.

So try Kellogg's PEP. Great for breakfast. And again for lunch or supper. Buy a red-and-green package from your grocer. Always fresh—sealed in the WAXTITE bag.

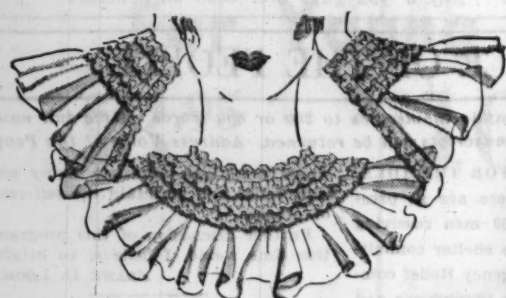

"People who have everything, but lack health, are poor. Guard your health and build it. For what you eat determines largely how you feel and what you accomplish."

A MOMENTOUS ACHIEVEMENT.

In the rush of critical events one accomplishment of the President has had less note than it deserves. When the perspective of time has brought a better sense of proportion we think Mr. Roosevelt's action upon veteran expenditure will have its due as one of the most courageous and important acts of patriotic statesmanship in our political history.

The immediate reduction in federal expenditure to be accomplished in this field is urgently needed. But this is only one benefit and in the long run probably the lesser benefit involved in the President's action. From the viewpoint of federal expenditure and taxation immediate relief was essential and the prospect of progressive increase in this expenditure cast a very dark shadow upon the future of federal finances. Huge as is the sum now exacted, it was destined to grow rapidly until it destroyed our federal finances.

But even more important than the financial aspect of this menace were its political implications. Veterans' relief had passed the limits of legitimate aid to men who had suffered physical impairment from their service to their country and to their dependents and those of soldiers who had died in or because of war service. It had become a means of getting money or money's equivalent from the public treasury upon the sole basis of enlistment. It had become the organized exaction of a class upon the public resources and if successful must have resulted in other class demands for public money. The logical consequence of this development must have been the bleeding white of American resources and the complete and fatal demoralization of American society.

The President has met this menace with courage and decision. He has refused to be cowed by formidable political pressure and propaganda. It is a service of the highest moment to the nation and to future generations as well as to the present. It will go down in our history as one of the great acts of our Presidents.

TRADE WITH THE SOVIET.

That mature statesman Mr. Philip La Follette, who has been employing his involuntary retirement from the cares of public office in a visit to the congenial scene of soviet Russia, has returned with the expected cargo of enthusiasm and advice to the government to recognize the Moscow without delay. The advice is supported by a glowing prediction of the enormous trade we may expect to develop once diplomatic relations with the Kremlin have been established.

This is the argument pushed to the foreground by the more canny advocates of recognition. The ladies who recently called upon the President in that behalf are above such considerations and simply wish the United States to give its blessing to another experiment of noble motive. But Senator Borah, Mr. Ivy Lee, Col. Cooper, and other more practical advocates, in and out of congress, are aware of the sensitiveness of the political mood at this time to the lure of economic gains. They are or will be eloquent with statistics upon the possibilities, not to say certainties, of the Russian market. It is pointed out by one enthusiast, for example, that the soviet government has set aside a third of the budget for 1933, or, according to its bookkeeping, ten billion rubles, for the development of Russian industries. Russia in 1931 expended $114,000,000 for American material, and how tremendous would be its expenditures were we invited to imagine if normal diplomatic relations are set up. "Millions, and perhaps even billions," says one callow advocate, "will be spent by the awakened Russian people, and only recognition is needed to start this tremendous financial ball rolling in the direction of American industry."

Why it is not rolling in the direction of England or France, both of which have enjoyed (in a manner of speaking) diplomatic relations with Moscow for years, this enthusiast does not explain. He is of the breed of Col. Mulberry Sellers and his eye-wash will have takers in congress. It is to be hoped the government and leadership in congress will not be found among them. The British government is just now experiencing the peculiarities of soviet relations as it has on several occasions hitherto. It has broken relations before and may do so again in spite of the advantages to trade alleged to be dependent upon them.

The representatives of a practical people should realize that, while the soviet government is able to control and direct expenditures more than most other governments, it is constrained by the same practical considerations and conditions as any other trader. One of these is the advantage of buying and selling and borrowing in the best available market for goods and money. There is no evidence in the experience of the countries having any relations with Russia that this sensible rule is neglected for any diplomatic or sentimental consideration. Indeed the soviet government's circumstances imperatively demand that it be respected. Increased trade with Russia depends not upon sentiment or diplomatic amenities but upon credit. If American trade and finance are ready to extend credit on long and liberal terms they can do business freely with the Kremlin, whether it has an ambassador in Washington or not. Diplomatic recognition is sought for the sake of the political prestige it will give, internally and externally, to the bolshevik regime. It cannot increase by a ruble the money Moscow has to spend for goods or add anything to the financial credit Moscow ought to be granted by provident traders or investors.

Congress and the government of the United States have this to consider when exhorted on financial and commercial grounds to recognize the bolshevik regime in the hope of profits, and they will do well to consider also whether the financial powers which have since the end of the war included the investment of American money in unstable countries ought to be encouraged to adventure more of it in bolshevik Russia. We may safely assume that the private investor who bought German, Brazilian, Peruvian securities, so called, and what have you, in the glad days of the boom will show more sales resistance nowadays. But we see no public advantage in assisting the more adventurous to give way.

The sentimental liberal demand for soviet recognition gets no substantial support from the economic argument. In itself it is a paradox which deserves nothing but contempt. A self-styled liberal who asks the government of democratic America to clasp the bloody hand of the bolshevik tyranny puts himself or herself out of the court of common sense.

UNCLE SAM'S WORK ARMY.

A new federal army for work is now being recruited, and after the men are conditioned they will be in the national forests for the summer, unless new occupations open for them in the meantime. At its maximum the new army will be small if compared with the total number of men in the country who should be at work. The present provision is for 250,000. Preference is being given to young men from 18 to 25 who have needy dependents to whose support they are willing to allot part of their earnings.

The men are lodged and fed by the government, and if army regulations are followed they will be well fed and well cared for. The pay is a dollar a day, which is the old farm hand wage when the work was of longer hours and the conditions not so uniformly good. Objections raised at first by organized labor have melted away. Of all the emergency relief measures proposed or enacted none seems more firmly grounded in good judgment and sound doctrine than this one of putting men willing to work on a job. What they do may not be imperative, but it need not follow that it will not be useful. In fact, the first moral qualification is that it shall be useful.

No man worthy of his subsistence and pay wants to do a useless thing. There is an old story of two men who got a new start in life when, after a trial, they threw down their tools on jobs an eccentric millionaire had offered them. One was to carry snow from one side of the street and dump it on the other. The other was to pound a log with the sledge end of an ax. The man with the ax would cut the wood, but he'd be damned if he'd pound it. And the man with the sledge would remove the snow, but he'd be damned if he'd dump it on the other side of the street. That's what their eccentric employer wanted to discover.

Although 250,000 men are not in numbers an impressive part of so large a nation they will be 250,000 taken from a demoralizing idleness which they resent and put into healthy surroundings, with provision for their physical well-being and the building up of their morale. The very fact that the first step is to give them two weeks' conditioning before they are put on the job is indication that idleness is already expected to have stamped itself on the body, if not on the character.

Small as the number is, there will be a test of administration in extemporizing and developing projects in which the work will count as a public benefit. The national well-being, the human element considered, would probably be well served if pending the return to normal conditions ten times the proposed number of men could be taken out of idleness and put in these federal work camps.

Editorial of the Day

NAZI INEPTITUDE.

Jules Sauerwein, the French Journalist, attributes the excesses of the Nazis to "hot heads and empty stomachs." Ambassador Sackett, our emissary to Berlin, declares that when a government "arrives in power by means of a political campaign of the intensity of the Nazi campaign it is always difficult in the beginning for it to prevent excesses by its partisans." Every country has had experience of political parties which have made their followers so drunk with slogans that it was all but impossible to persuade the zealots that, once the job is secured, slogans are left behind.

In spite of all such allowances, however, one cannot condone such incredible excesses as the national boycott of Jewish professional and business men, or even hope to understand it. Nor do we believe that the German people themselves will condone it indefinitely. The Nazis, in the arrogance of power, may sneer at the rebuke administered by Dr. Einstein in renouncing his citizenship, but a sober Germany, which respects learning and reveres science, will cringe from the blow. The ignorant are always able to throw stones, sing derisive songs, and leave fustian to those in the long range of history they are unable to retain control. Like the Pretorians, they fall victims to their own pride. Eventually it becomes clear that hot heads fill no stomachs.

The unfortunate inability to appreciate points of view other than their own, which hampered Germany's presentation of her case during the war, appears to afflict the Nazis to a marked degree. Their manifesto proclaiming a boycott of Jewish business and professional people is put forward as a means of silencing foreign suspicions concerning Germany's attitude toward the Jews. It seems to be assumed that, if foreigners can be convinced that Jews are not being beaten or stoned, people everywhere will accept cheerfully and gratefully the policy of ruining them economically. The Nazi order goes farther and declares that Germans who have contacts abroad must use them to "disseminate the truth," which is, of course, that Germany "conducts its fight against Jewish atrocity propaganda as a purely defensive measure."

The Hitler government considers itself neutral in this business, although it must be obvious that the Nazi party could hardly have issued such an order without the consent to state the minimum of probability of such members of the cabinet as Dr. Goebbels and Capt. Goering. The former is minister of propaganda, but he seems completely incapable of making a case for Hitlerism for use outside the national borders. And Dr. Hanfstaengl, who "contacts" the foreign press correspondents, has done no better. It is indeed unfortunate for Germany, whose reputation abroad was so competently built up by men like Stresemann and Brüning, that a mob of fanatics should now imperil that hardly won favor.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the type fall where they may.

"IF ALL THE APPARATUS of telegraph, telephone, and wireless in North America," says Prof. Judson Herrick, "could be squeezed into a half gallon cup it would be less intricate than one human brain." Maybe so, maybe so, but we'll bet if all the telegraph, telephone, and wireless in North America was squeezed into a half gallon cup it would think up something better to write on a postcard than: "Having a grand time; wish you were here."

AND, GRANTING that the human brain is truly marvelous, how does the professor account for college cheer leaders, people who say "all right," and those who write anonymous letters?

AND WE'D MUCH SOONER trust a half gallon cup full of all the telegraph, telephone, and wireless apparatus in North America on the driver's seat of an auto than the brain of a hit and run driver. And we'll bet the half gallon cup full of apparatus wouldn't go weaving in and out through traffic or go slam bang through a red light or drive a car with faulty brakes or without any at all.

AND WOULD a half gallon tin can full of telegraph, telephone, and wireless apparatus ever go in for kidnapping? Or for hurling a bomb from a swift speeding car or borrow books and not return them?

HONEST, PROF., sometimes we meet people that we know we could get on much pleasanter with if they had a half gallon of telegraph, telephone, and wireless apparatus in the top of their dome instead of a brain. Anyhow, they wouldn't be calling us up and saying, "Guess who this is?"

SONNETS TO A PORTRAIT.

Having known grief, I now am fugitive,
Seeking pale beauty, bearing on my head
The carven vase I modeled but to give
As marking urn for some anointed dead.
And, as a sculptor must, I worked in clay,
Thinking of marble, carving the design
That droops like weak anemones today,
Now that I know you are no longer mine.

With bland appraisal I look on the spring,
As one would see an altar in a wood;
Dispassionately I observe the swing
Of prisoned time; would free it if I could.
My grief is but the clamor of old pain,
Crying her wares from down the street again.

I looked awhile into the evening sky
And saw the sun, flushed with creative mood,
Paint colors for the Infinite, as I
Sensed wonder caught in love's near altitude.
As stellar archipelagoes of light
Streamed down to earth from drifts of cobalt blue,
I contemplated wisdom on a night
Heavy with speech, with words that called to you.

A dynamo of silence in my ears
Unanswering as acorn to the oak—
Looked back through spreading arches of the years,
Renaimented words that once you spoke.

And now I know, as through the night I ride—
Love dominates the circumstance of tide.

RACHEL MACK WILSON.

AND NOW we're very sure we want to go to the Great Smoky mountains come vacation. A pamphlet from the Department of the Interior says that while the government has extended administration and protection to the park in the Great Smoky mountains it cannot undertake general development until 417,000 acres have been tendered and accepted by the U. S. A. That suits us down to the ground—we are perfectly willing to be administered by the government and we'll gladly accept protection, but we do not yearn for general development. General development usually means signs to keep off the grass, hot dogs and cold pop, tents and golf courses and tennis courts. We can't really feel we're getting back close to nature when we're dodging golf balls or hearing sweet young things screaming "Forty love!"

NOR DO WE ENTIRELY credit the report that Franklin Delano is sending two hundred and fifty thousand men into the forests to get out enough lumber to supply the jig saw puzzle demand. However, it would be a terrible thing for the country if there should come a day when there wasn't enough jig saw puzzles to go around. Hasten men, law, to the forests. To the forests.

NOW THAT LAW has been passed making it possible to send anybody to the hoosegow who spills our military secrets to foreign powers there is more curiosity than ever over what military secrets we have. We think (but we wouldn't tell Japan for worlds) that our great military secret is why do we still have cavalry in the army when everything that moves has been motorized. Well, we think we are still hanging onto cavalry so that the horses will give a good alibi to the officers for wearing spurs. They got so tired of people saying they wore spurs just to keep their feet from slipping off their roll top desks. This is only a guess on our part and if they put us in the hoosegow for telling it we'll say it was a joke.

THE YEARS.

How fickle are the years that wait on men!
A score brings sweetness, strength and beauty, then Another score steals them away again.

The third score comes, like all the other years,
With smiles, and takes its toll of sighs and tears,
Till every youthful vestige disappears.

The slaves of youth; of middle age, the peers;
Grim tyrants to the old—the changing years.

EOLUS.

AND THE GREATEST relief about being coming back is that it will give people something to talk about for a few days instead of moaning over their favorite bootlegger being in jail again.

THE WHYS OF SOME ASTHMAS.

THE number and variety of substances, exposure to which may cause asthma, expands as experience accumulates. The discovery that fungi, such as yeast and molds, may be the allergy agents has increased the directions in which we must look in searching for the cause of the asthmatic attack. The fungi are very well adapted to life on many household articles, and to make matters worse, they dry easily and become incorporated in dust.

Dr. G. T. Brown reports a series of cases of asthma in which mold or yeast, spread principally by household articles, were the agents most responsible for the trouble in breathing.

I got better of my asthma after having my sleeping quarters thoroughly cleaned, getting a new mattress and pillows and covering both of these with a special fabric, and keeping out all dust. In this case several molds acting in association appeared to be the cause.

C. had asthma very bad when he was in his house. It was due to molds in the house dust. Thorough cleaning and making use of a new mattress and pillows covered by rubber stepped his trouble.

A schoolgirl had asthma due to molds drawn out of her mattress by means of a vacuum cleaner. Her parents got a new mattress and her asthma disappeared. An 11 year old boy, who had asthma due to molds which were made very much worse by sleeping on an old mattress in a schooner. E. a girl of 7, also got well when she was given a new, clean mattress. If, an year or two ago, was another of the cases with asthma due to mattress dust.

G. had asthma, particularly in weather that kept him indoors. When he got rid of a musty old rug that had been on the floor for fifteen years and vacuum cleaned the mattress and everything else the trouble was at an end.

Mrs. T. had asthma of eighteen years' duration due to house dust containing several molds. Miss J. had sneezing spells that were very persistent and annoying. Her trouble was found to be due to molds such as are often found in house dust. Mrs. G. had asthma that came on after spring cleaning. She was made worse by exposure to mattress dust. The harmful ingredient in this dust was a mixture of molds and not hair or skin cells.

Miss M. had eczema. Cultures made

E. H. N. writes: What is milk leg? Some say only dairymen have it, caused by milking cows when sitting on short stools in hot weather. Others say only baseball catchers get it, from sitting on their toes and calves when catching behind the bat. Is milk leg inherited or acquired? Does it cause one to have toe crutches? Is it curable? What is the cure?

REPLY: Did some one fill you up on last April for the next one? Milk leg is caused by an infection of a vein. A clot forms in the infected vein. The name was given it because so many women have it as an immediate consequence of childbirth. But this type of low grade infection can occur in men as well as in women and at different ages and from different causes. Recovery is to be expected, but not infrequently full rehabilitation of the circulation requires months or years.

NOT ALWAYS. Does emphysema cause pulmonary tuberculosis? If so, how long after?

REPLY: As a rule, it does not, although there are exceptions. Emphysema is purulent pleurisy. Purulent pleurisy is usually caused by pneumococci or pus cocci. Tubercle bacilli cause a pleurisy with watery effusion.

LIGHT POLES.

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If an electric light pole stands in front of a residence in the middle of a lot, (1) can it be removed? (2) What is the ordinance covering the wires disconnected, and the electric light people admitted that it was wrong to have the pole in the center of the home-site? (3) In the street. It shows more plainly now since the trees were removed. Some old trees were removed and the electric light poles? 4. How can one go about getting the pole removed? L. W.

1. Yes, unless the owner or his predecessor in title has made a binding agreement to the contrary or the pole has been maintained for more than twenty years.

2. The above was based on the assumption that the pole was in the lot. The words in the street imply the contrary. We cannot advise to advantage without having a diagram making the location more clear.

3. The location is a matter of private agreement where private property is concerned.

TITLE TO PROPERTY.

Chicago, April 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am the owner of a bungalow in which there is a mortgage, the loan having been obtained through a bank. I was wondering what papers I should have and what papers should be in possession of the bank or the mortgage holder. 1. Should I have the deed or should the mortgage holder? 2. Should I have possession of the certificate of title to property issued by the Torrens system or is that, too, held by the mortgage holder? 3. What papers should I have in my own possession evidencing title to the property? J. H. A.

1. Ordinarily the fee owner would have the warranty deed, but if the instrument has been recorded then possession of it is not important.

2. The commonest procedure would be for you to have the "owner's" Torrens certificate and the mortgage holder to have a duplicate. If the property is registered under the Torrens system, then the Torrens office is the best source of information.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 8, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Administration leaders decided to unlock at once the vast financial resources of the United States to the allies. To raise the economic morale of the citizens governments a huge loan of dimensions yet undetermined, but not less than two billion dollars, will be forthcoming from the country as speedily as Congress can pass the necessary legislation. Not a penny of profit, it was authoritatively stated, will be expected or received by this country on the loan. The loan will be America's immediate contribution to the allied cause, with the promise of other bountiful contributions of money, munitions, and foodstuffs to come as needed. An immediate bond issue, possibly totaling five billion dollars, is forecast for the purpose of providing the loan to the allies as well as to furnish adequate funds for this country's own war needs.

WAR PREPARATIONS.—Berlin reports that Austria will break with America at once. The crew of a German cruiser interned at Guam blew up their ship as the Americans were about to seize it. The secretary of war explained the early need of a big army to the senate military affairs committee. The members backed at the time of the training. A report that a German raider is off Nantucket caused an order to be issued keeping all shipping in ports.

LONDON.—Above the growing crash of cannon on the western front there has developed a terrific battle for the supremacy of the air. During the last three days the loss in planes, both allied and German, far exceeds any previously recorded in the war. Berlin credits German flyers with having destroyed forty-four allied airplanes yesterday. The London official statement declares that on April 6 and 7 British pilots with their fighters sent fifteen German machines plunging to earth, drove off thirty-one more in a damaged condition, and left ten captive balloons burning fiercely. From Paris, too, comes news of almost feverish aerial activity on the part of the French, one of their squadrons having managed separate raids yesterday. This warfare in the air forebodes the approach of fighting on a grand scale, heralded for several days by the increasing violence of the guns which have been spraying their projectiles over the whole length of the line.

WAR SUMMARY.—The British reached Fresnoy-le-Petit, three miles northeast of St. Quentin. The French report further advances on the western front. The Germans fired 7,500 shells into Rheims yesterday. Bad weather conditions caused a halt in operations on the Italian front.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 250 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, Chicago, April 4.—There are at present approximately 20,000 men receiving relief through the men's shelter committee of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. Of these about 12,000 sleep and eat at the shelters, another 4,000 have their lodging outside but get their meals at the shelters, while the remaining 4,000 live and eat outside but receive some assistance from the shelter committee, especially in the form of made work or work relief. The latter receive 1 to 4 days' work a month at $4 a day. They are engaged in cleaning up vacant lots, weeding meal tickets and 25 cents in cash. It is exceedingly difficult to find practical work which these men can do. They have been engaged almost wholly in cleaning up vacant lots privately owned. The regulations of union labor will not permit them to do any work on public property. This is very deplorable because a sensible work program is a good thing all around. It is good for the men. It eliminates from relief those who are unwilling to work and it also gives the public something in return for the relief which is given. If it were possible to use these men on the public streets and in parks and on other public property in certain sections of the city where they could be engaged in such labor as cleaning and repairing of streets, the cleaning and repainting of parkways, etc., it would seem that this might be done without direct contact with union labor and without affecting the wages of labor generally.

The same general situation of course controls the entire made work program. Family men, some 200,000 of them, living on relief in the county, could do a great deal of public work if public work could be found for them. At present, if they are engaged in any public work, they must receive the prevailing labor scale. This wage for ordinary labor is $5.50 a day, which is, of course, far above the real prevailing rate at the present time. The real prevailing rate for such labor at present is probably not much above 35 or 40 cents an hour with union labor. On any basis of sound economics and sound relief those who are able to earn their relief should do so whenever useful work can be found. Since this work is in the nature of the case less efficient than ordinary work, the workers being selected on the basis of relief rather than on the basis of efficiency, the wage paid should be somewhat lower than the prevailing rate. It should be enough lower so that the worker has the incentive to seek normal employment wherever possible. It should not be so much lower as to result in cutting the wages of normal workers below what would otherwise be the prevailing rate. It would be most wholesome in our present relief situation if the relief organizations, public and private, could find a great deal of outside public work for the relief men. As such able-bodied men and women on relief on the above basis. If the actual prevailing rate at present for ordinary labor is, say, $3 a day, then a wage of $2.50 a day for earned relief would seem reasonable. Families on relief could in this way pay for relief they get, and the workers should in addition receive some small allowance in cash. Such a program would doubtless eliminate many people from relief and maintain the self-respect of others. Further discussion of this program at this time would, I believe, be helpful. FRANK D. LOOMIS.

FARMS FOR THE IDLE.

Chicago, April 5.—Every one knows that unoccupied property soon becomes "run down" and deteriorates in value. During the last few years many farms and other properties have been foreclosed upon. In Cook and adjoining counties are many idle farms of various sizes, a large number of which are in the control of insurance companies, banks and mortgage brokers. Many of these properties are suitable for truck gardening and poultry raising, and this is the time of the year to start that kind of work. Why could not a few of these unoccupied properties be offered to some of Chicago's self-respecting unemployed for a year or so, and in lieu of rent let the occupant keep the buildings in repair, clean up and cultivate the land? Real estate values are sure to advance in another year, and a well kept property is a salable asset. Although I'm a skilled mechanic, I am also thoroughly experienced in general farming and poultry raising. Having been unemployed for many months I would welcome the offer of such a proposition. UNEMPLOYED.

RIGHT ABOUT.

Chicago, April 4.—An article in "This column today by J. F. Straley sings the praise of the Rev. Charles Coughlin for his present campaign in the banking controversy. With all due respect to Father Coughlin, let us not be too hurried with our praise and applause. We still remember the complete about-face on the service men's bonus question.

For almost three years he agitated and campaigned, during which time he often embarrassed the administration by his constant and insistent demand that the government could and should make an immediate payment of a bonus to the ex-service men. With the advent of the new administration he completely turned about in a recent broadcast and advised the veterans to forget it. The government could not pay it.

FAIR PLAY.

FROM ANOTHER LEGION POST.

Elmwood Park, Ill., April 1.—Be it resolved that we, the members of Elmwood Park post, No. 686, American Legion, in meeting assembled this 27th day of March, A. D. 1933, hereby reaffirm our loyalty to our country and record our confidence in the fair-mindedness of the chief executive by cheerfully accepting the findings of our aggressive new commander in chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

FRANK M. HARTMAN, Commander.

INTERESTING IF TRUE.

Chicago, April 5.—If the requirements for a patrolman to pass the civil service examination are 5 feet 9 inches and 28 years our distinguished diplomat Richard Collins didn't enforce them. There are some rookies now at school who have seen their fortieth birthday and are not more than 5 feet 7 inches. It looks like Democratic influence.

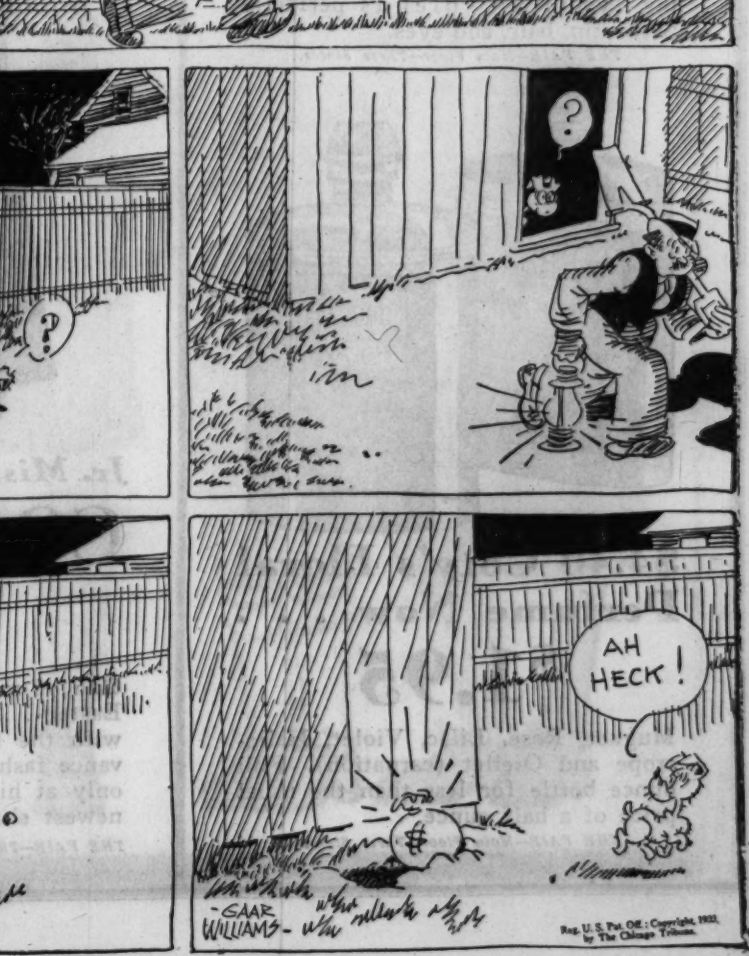

JEREMIAH FALLER.

SUPERFLUOUS WORDS.

Chicago, April 3.—If the city council is foolish enough to again change street names, why not drop the useless appendage of "street" or "avenue"? 109 North State or South State is sufficient. Think of the saving to every one, including newspapers.

NO WOMAN REALLY WANTS LESS THAN THIS

○ live in an ideal apartment, to have a place in which she can give full expression to her personality, this hope fills every woman.

Are you happy in your present apartment? Does it fit your ideals? If it doesn't, decide to do something about it now. Spring is one of the most favorable times to look for a new apartment.

Turn to the want ad section in today's Tribune and read over the offerings listed there. You will find an attractive selection of the most desirable apartments, in all rental ranges from $25 a month up. In whatever section of the city or suburbs you desire to live there is certain to be a representative selection in the Tribune. When you have consulted the Tribune you can be practically certain you have checked up on the most appealing of the apartments in the neighborhood you prefer.

Save yourself time, trouble and duplication of effort! Know before you start to look at any apartment what is available and whether it is worth while looking at in person. Avoid fruitless stair climbing by starting your apartment hunting with the help of the Tribune want ad section.

THE World's Fair will bring to Chicago thousands of families who must be housed. This tremendous addition to Chicago's population will undoubtedly put a premium on all available apartments. It is best not to wait too long before deciding on your new apartment if you are to get the one you want at the rent you want to pay.

MEN OF 18 TO 25 WILL GET CALL FOR FOREST JOBS

to Be Used.

Young men between the ages of 18 and 25 who are already on the Emergency Relief Commission's list of applicants for work and relief will be given first preference in the selection of Chicago's contingent of the reforestation army. This was announced yesterday by Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the relief commission, following receipt of a telegram of instructions from Frances Perkins, secretary of labor.

"Miss Perkins states emphatically that the selection is to be made from lists that have already been made up," said Mr. Reynolds. "In view of this fact, it is not necessary for men to apply at relief stations or at any other place for assignment to these projects.

Have Complete Data.
The relief stations have complete data on the families they are helping and with this information to guide them they will select the persons to be assigned to the projects. Those selected will be notified as soon as assignments are to be made.

"Young, unmarried men have had the greatest difficulty in recent years in securing either work or relief and these men have both themselves and numbers of others dependent upon them. Therefore the group on our lists between the ages of 18 and 25 of unmarried men with dependents will receive preference in the first selections.

"In addition to this group there will also be selected a relatively small number of unemployed men of suitable age and experience, residents in the area to be developed by the emergency conservation work."

Each State Given Quota.

The telegram from Secretary Perkins said, in part: "Each state will be assigned its equitable quota from the 250,000 persons selected to do this work. The labor department will consult with the state official having had the administration of unemployment relief in the respective states and will arrange for the selection of men from the lists of applicants for work and other assistance which already exist."

Brig. Gen. Frank C. Bolles, commander of Fort Sheridan, where the first Chicago and Milwaukee contingents of the reforestation army, totaling 4,500, will be mobilized, yesterday directed the preparation of a tent encampment for the accommodation of 500 men on the summer camp grounds of the army post. Details were also assigned to clean up the mess halls of the summer camp area, located on the lake front, southeast of the main parade ground.

Await Arrival of Recruits.

Although no word has been received at the fort concerning the date on which the first men will be received, everything will be in readiness when the recruits start coming in, Brig. Gen. Bolles said. The work army recruits during their training period will be commanded by regular army officers assigned to Fort Sheridan, the officers taking turns of duty with the civilian recruits from day to day.

According to the meager information received at the fort, it is considered unlikely that more than 500 men will be encamped there at any one time.

Other Quarters Available.

Washington, D. C., April 7.—(Special.)—While most of Chicago's quota of 4,000 in the initial battalion of the Roosevelt conservation corps will be trained at Fort Sheridan, Ill., a number of the Chicago recruits will be sent to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and Camp Custer, Mich.

The movement of men to the conditioning camps is expected to be started tomorrow in many sections of the country. Their transportation is to be handled by the army area corps commanders. Army clothing is to be furnished the workers upon their arrival at the various training stations.

Gov. Alfred G. Schmedeman of Wisconsin called on President Roosevelt today to urge that after the initial forestry work is begun the federal government include in its program state forestry projects in Wisconsin which were begun under Gov. Ralph M. Immell.

WEST AUSTRALIA TO VOTE TODAY ON SECESSION

(Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.)
PERTH, West Australia, April 7.—The citizens of Western Australia will vote tomorrow whether they are in favor of secession from the Australian commonwealth or whether they favor a convention composed of representatives from each of the Australian states to revise the federal constitution.

Difficult post-war times have inflamed local patriotism and the movement for secession has gathered such momentum that an affirmative vote at tomorrow's referendum is regarded as quite possible. Prime Minister Lyons took such a serious view of the situation that he rushed here last week to appeal to the people not to disrupt the commonwealth.

J. G. Alexander's Home in Lake Forest Is Looted

Thieves early yesterday ransacked the mansion of James G. Alexander, Chicago financier, at 1230 North Waukegan road, Lake Forest. Police Chief Tiffany of the suburb said he believed the loss in clothing, rugs, and other valuables would amount to several thousand dollars.

CROWE APPEAL RECORD IS READY AFTER 14 MONTHS

Fourteen months after Timothy J. Crowe and Frank J. Link, former sanitary district trustees were found guilty of criminal conspiracy and sentenced to serve one to five years in the penitentiary, the records for their appeal to the appellate court were completed. Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher, who was trial judge with Judges James J. Kelly and John Prystalski, yesterday signed and sealed the bill of exception filed by the defendants.

Delay in preparing these records, prosecutors from the state's attorney's office said, was caused when the defense sought to exclude from the record the minutes of the sanitary district meetings at which a $1,000,000 contract with the Tulley-Costello company was ordered paid. Luring the graft trial it was brought out that this company performed repair work on machinery of the district and was paid in full. It also was proved that the district trustees authorized payment of another million dollars to half a dozen obscure companies, all allegedly performing the same work. It was charged that these smaller companies were organized by political friends of the defendants.

After a bitter argument the defense counsel agreed yesterday to a stipulation which includes the minutes of the district covering these transactions.

ELECT SCHOOL BOARDS TODAY; COST $100,000

Winnetka Is Scene of the Liveliest Battle.

The school board election to be held in Winnetka today is expected to be the liveliest of elections to be held in a number of suburbs for members of the local boards of education. Most of the contests are perfunctory, however, and County Judge Edmund K. Jarocki took occasion yesterday to point out that these elections will cost more than $100,000.

Jarocki expressed regret that the state legislature had taken no action on legislation he had sponsored for the consolidating of a number of spring elections together with the June judicial elections.

Heavy Waste of Taxes.

"The refusal of the legislature to pass the law has already cost Cook county and Chicago more than $100,000," said the judge. "And there are still a number of small elections to be held in the suburbs. These elections are expensive and it has been a needless waste of the taxpayers' money to cling to the antiquated method of holding a separate election for each position as village officials, grade school district boards, high school trustees, and park district commissioners."

Judge Jarocki pointed out that the Chicago aldermanic election and run-off cost more than $750,000, an item which could have been saved if it had been held the same date as the June judicial election.

"Suburban officials were willing to consolidate the elections," he declared, "but the legislature, for trivial reasons, could not reach an agreement on legislation. In Berwyn, for example, it cost $14,000 to elect seven aldermen whose combined salaries are $7,200 and the school election in Cicero alone cost more than $10,000. Small municipalities need such savings in these days."

If the consolidated election plan had been put into effect throughout the state more than $5,000,000 would have been saved to the taxpayers in the cost of elections this year, the judge estimated.

Washburne Center of Fight.

The heated Winnetka school election centers around Carleton Washburne, superintendent of schools in the suburb, and his enemies have put up a slates of candidates for the school board. Washburne's educational system, which he has developed in the suburb for the last twenty years, has attracted wide attention. The system stresses the individuality of the pupil, promoting him as rapidly as his aptitude warrants.

Charges of communistic and Socialistic tendencies have been made against Mr. Washburne by his opponents in the school fight. A statement denying that the superintendent was on the police lists as a communist was made yesterday by Lieut. Max Mills, head of the Chicago detective bureau communist squad.

When Mr. Washburne returned in 1927 from Russia he received a letter stating that he was a communist, said Lieut. Mills. "We investigated and found no basis for the charge. The reports appear to be of a political nature."

Clarence B. Randall, candidate for president of the school board, heads the late which supports Washburne and the present educational system, and Arthur G. Henning is his opponent.

Another school fight has been waged in Kenilworth where economy is the issue.

Clarence B. Randall, candidate for president of the school board, heads the late which supports Washburne and the present educational system, and Arthur G. Henning is his opponent.

SAY GIRL OF 13 ASKED $10,000 AS CHILD STEALER

New York, April 7. (Special.)—It was told in court today how a 13-year old Brooklyn high school girl, with an appetite for mystery stories, attempted to extort $10,000 from a physician on the threat of kidnapping his 11-year old daughter. The girl, Elaine Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Perry of Brooklyn, was arraigned in the Children's court.

Dr. W. B. Anderson of Brooklyn, received a letter last Tuesday demanding the money and threatening kidnapping of Lucille Anderson, a student at the Shore Road academy. He was told to drive along 6th avenue, Brooklyn.

On Thursday morning Dr. Anderson received another letter, to wrap the money in a bundle and deposit it in a refuse container.

Dr. Anderson notified the police then carried out instructions, using a dummy package. A few minutes later, according to the police, Elaine was reaching into the refuse container and arrested her. The police said she told them her father was an unemployed pie checker and she intended to give her family some money, if she got it.

Admit Dean Roscoe Pound to Practice Law in Boston

Boston, Mass., April 7. (AP)—Dean Roscoe Pound, head of the Harvard Law school, was admitted to practice law at the Massachusetts bar before Judge William Cushing today. Although Dean Pound had been a member of the Nebraska bar for many years and had never served as dean of the Harvard Law school, he never had taken up the practice of law in this state.

CHICAGO POLICE FAIL TO ENFORCE HARD TIRES BAN

Many Trucks Observed Violating Law.

BY HAL FOUST.

The police are not enforcing the law prohibiting the use of hard tires on vehicles driven faster than ten miles an hour on streets and highways in Illinois. The law, which was adopted in the summer of 1931, became effective on Jan. 1, 1932, but has been almost entirely ignored.

Police Commissioner Allan on Feb. 21 issued a general order calling for enforcement of the hard tire ban. The police arrested the drivers of a number of cars which were parked at curbs. These cases were thrown out of court because there was no evidence of exceeding the ten miles an hour speed limit. There have been no arrests since.

"The speed limit makes it a difficult law to enforce," said Supervising Captain Horan of the police traffic division.

Exceeding 10 Mile Limit.

This trucker roader in three hours of driving yesterday, trailed a dozen hard tired trucks going faster than ten miles an hour. Two that were found keeping within their speed limit were blocking traffic.

In Touhy avenue, a Chicago Cartage company truck was followed west from Clark street at 9:45 o'clock. It was going fifteen miles an hour. The license number was C-5870. East in Touhy a few minutes later, a Baer's Express and Van company carrier with 1932 license B-15-327, was checked at twenty-two miles an hour.

At 10 o'clock, a Chicago Fire Brick company truck was southbound in Western avenue, loaded with gravel. It was traveling fifteen miles an hour with 1932 license B-15-327. A dirty 1932 license plate was illegible.

A little farther south in Western avenue, a truck with 1932 license B-20-864 was thumping the pavement with worn solid tires at fifteen miles an hour. The name La Rone was written on the side in chalk.

Trailers with Hard Tires.

A train of three garbage trailers with hard tires was dragged at seven miles an hour north in Western avenue to Montrose. The truck, carrying the seal of the city of Chicago, bore state license B-15-327. The length was far in excess of the maximum under the state vehicle code.

Beer trucks, many with solid tires, were rushing through the streets with congenial motorists surrendering the right of way with a smile.

A Northwestern Beverage company truck, 1932 license B-15-383, was followed east in Chicago avenue at twenty miles an hour. With a roaring exhaust and tooting whistle, it ran right at Halsted street.

Texaco Oil company tank with hard tires was running at twenty miles an hour in Clybourn avenue. The license was G-1514. Gasoline tankers of other companies were also seen with hard tires, but their speeds were not determined. Broken pavements retard automotive transportation and hurt the business of these companies.

A South State street asphalt truck was pounding the bumpy asphalt at eighteen miles an hour. A sign identified the owner as the Quality Coal Sales company. The license was G-955. Twenty years ago this truck was a complete gas engine hauled wagon that was destroying the pavements.

Investigation committee also would be empowered to inquire into all receiverships in bankruptcy involving motion pictures concerns; all leasing and building of motion picture theaters, and the underwriting and sale of motion picture securities.

The "disposition of the assets of various companies in the payment of exorbitant and unmerited salaries" would likewise be investigated under Mr. Sirovich's proposal.

Widow of Alexander Beck, Pioneer Lumberman, Dead

Mrs. Anne Beck, widow of Alexander Beck, pioneer lumberman on the south side, died yesterday at her home, 7619 Phillips avenue, after a long illness. She was 85 years old.

She is survived by three daughters and one son. Funeral services will be held at St. Bride's church, 7800 Coles avenue, at 9:30 a. m. Monday.

Wife of the Rev. Hanscom, Algonquin Minister, Dead

Mrs. Fred L. Hanscom, 62 years old, died Thursday at her home in Algonquin. Her husband, the Rev. Fred L. Hanscom, has been a minister of the Congregational church for forty years.

Boy Who Fired Shotgun at Children Is Sentenced

Anthony Tabasz, 18 years old, 2331 West Walton street, charged with firing a shotgun at a group of boys and girls on April 1, was sentenced by Judge John Gutknecht yesterday to serve six months in the Bridewell.

Margaret Schild, 13 years old, 1016 North Hermitage avenue, in front of whose home the shooting took place, was wounded in the left leg. Tabasz confessed, saying he had hoped to induce a rival for the affections of a neighboring belle.

Pope Pius Prays for Holy Year Indulgence

VATICAN CITY, April 7. (AP)—Like an ordinary pilgrim, Pope Pius entered St. Peter's cathedral through the holy door at the morning and knelt before the altar of the confessional, begging indulgence for the holy year. He was attended by the cardinals and prelates of the Papal court. Religious students were present, but the cathedral was closed to the public.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 7. (AP)—Mrs. C. R. Frazier, wife of a former United States narcotics chief here, was acquitted by a federal court jury tonight of a charge of murder for the shooting of her husband's secretary, Miss Manona Murrell, 26 years old, blonde divorcee, who she said "attempted to break up my home."

DE VALERA ASKS DAIL TO TAKE A LONG "VACATION"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, April 7.—Cries of "Hitlerism" and "abolish parliament altogether" greeted President De Valera today in the Dail Eireann when he suggested that the Free State parliament should be given a six months' vacation to enable the government to carry out its contemplated program.

De Valera was replying to a two hours' debate on illness, during which his general policy was severely criticized. He defended the government's efforts, but admitted that they were not altogether successful.

The government, he said, had not done miracles, but it had made more progress than industrialized countries. His ministers, he said, "had other work besides listening to speeches made for the press." He claimed to be more democratic than the opposition members.

Gov. Richard Mulcahy interrupted: "Democrat since 1932." The president described Mulcahy as "a militarist and nothing else." He warned the people that they would have to make further sacrifices and said he hoped that they would respond.

PEER RENOUNCES U. S.; BECOMES BRITISH CITIZEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 7.—After being a citizen of the United States for 27 years, Oliver Henry Walker, Eighth Earl of Portsmouth, has become a naturalized Britisher.

His name appeared tonight in the London Gazette in the "list of aliens to whom certificates of naturalization have been granted by the secretary of state and whose oath of allegiance was registered with the home office during the month of March, 1933."

The Earl of Portsmouth went to the United States as a young man and became an American citizen in 1906. He owns the 3,000 acre Big Horn ranch in Sheridan county, Wyoming. He was a member of the Wyoming legislature from 1907 to 1911. He succeeded his brother to the title in 1925 and had to become naturalized before he could take his seat in the house of lords.

OWNER OF HOTEL IN WHICH 7 DIED DURING FIRE HELD FOR MURDER

Omaha, Neb., April 7. (AP)—Harry Weiner, owner of the Millard hotel, which was destroyed by fire Feb. 8, with death to seven firemen, was held without bail tonight on charges of arson and first degree murder while committing arson.

The charges were filed early today by state officials as the result of a secret investigation by Deputy State Fire Marshal George Davis, Deputy State Attorney General William C. Ramsey and Douglas County Attorney Henry Beal. The complaint was signed by Davis. Weiner surrendered.

The second complaint specifically charged Weiner with causing the death of Franklin Kape, a pipeman, who was one of the firemen killed by a falling wall in a narrow alley.

Otto Maurer, former engineer at the hotel, was arrested as a state witness. The state claims Weiner had the hotel insured for $222,000 and that he wilfully set fire to it.

"MISLED BY WHITE HOUSE," DEFENSE IN BUSBY CASE

Attorneys yesterday continued arguments on evidence presented in document form by Mrs. Esther Busby, widow of the late John D. Busby, Trust and Savings bank as executor of the estate of her husband, Leonard A. Busby, surface lines executive who died in 1930, and the replacement in the estate of $500,000 in securities.

The defense asserted that Mrs. Busby charged in a petition now on hearing before Probate Judge Harold J. Taylor that the assets became worthless because the executor failed to sell the securities while their market value was high.

John D. Busby, D. Black, counsel for the bank, argued yesterday that no proof has been offered to show that the executor should have known that the stock market would continue to decline following Mr. Busby's death. He asserted that the defense was misled by "assertions from the White House that prosperity was just around the corner." Such statements, the lawyer said, caused the banking officials to believe that the wisest course was to hold the securities.

GLENCOE WOMAN IN AUTO-TRUCK COLLISION DIES

Mrs. Selma Klepper, 30 years old, of 343 Park avenue, Glencoe, died yesterday in the Connel Memorial hospital. She died of injuries suffered early in the morning when an automobile in which she was riding crashed into a stalled truck near Half Day, in Lake county.

Her husband, Earl, who was driving, was injured. He told police the truck was unlicensed. The driver was Edward Maynard, employed in the studios of Miss Eleanor Pratt of Bruce Lake.

John Wydeveld, 46 years old, 121st street and Erie Island avenue, a truck farmer, was fatally injured yesterday at 89th street and Ashland avenue by an automobile driven by Dr. A. W. Ahrendt, 7800 South Ashland avenue, a dentist. Wydeveld died soon afterward in the Little Company of Mary hospital.

This death increased the 1933 Cook county automobile toll to 221.

COMMONS ROW OVER BILL TO BAR WAR ON RELIGION

Moscow Is Charged with Spreading Atheism.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 7.—A lively discussion of religion and the right of freedom of thought kept the house of commons at a high pitch today during second reading of the bill to suppress atheistic instruction among children.

The measure was moved by Sir Reginald Craddock, Conservative, who said there is a world-wide anti-God movement fostered by Moscow. He quoted one of Lenin's doctrines, "Give us a child for five years and it will be bolshevist forever and compared atheism to a contagious disease, which eventually would destroy the country.

Protects All Religions.

He asserted that any kind of religion is better than none at all. He emphasized that his bill protects anyone who is not a member of the "only" form of blasphemy to be penalized is described as "words, spoken or written, or pictorial representations, whereby it is sought to bring the Christian or any other form of religion into contempt by means of ribald, contumacious, or scurrilous language."

Sir Reginald said that attacks on Christianity were carried out in Great Britain by the Young Communist league. He pointed out that the October club, a communist organization at Oxford university, had 300 members.

Duchess Backs Move.

The Duchess of Atholl seconded the measure. The product of a set of posters in which God and the pope were caricatured and the Jewish and Mohammedan faiths were reviled. She said that the League of Militant Atheists, whose headquarters are in Berlin, had opened a branch in London.

E. H. Pickering, Liberal, moving rejection of the bill, was heckled with shouts of "Nonsense!"

"The great enemies of Christianity are not the Bible, but the bench of bishops and certain great writers who are doing damage with the weapons of reason, courtesy, and wit," Pickering said.

The bill was given second reading without division.

By Mae Tine.
We admirers of Mr. Warren William were getting worried about him. BECAUSE—all signs point toward the probability of his becoming a one role man.

He had proved so capable in dominating, heartless characterizations—and had been given one after another of such to portray "Too bad!" we said, "on account of he's an actor who could play anything, given the chance." Well...

"The Mind Reader" hands him his opportunity to prove versatile, and he fulfills all the great expectations of his rosters.

A fakir is Mr. William this trip. First we see him as a roving "painless" dentist. Then—he promotes a hair concoction, guaranteed to take the kink out of African locks. Again he is discovered attempting to interest the public in a flagpole sitting contest. And then—he is Chandra, crystal seer.

Due to this chap's perspicacity and knowledge of human nature the last stunt goes over well for a long period, while Chandra, for the first time in his shady life, falls in love.

He marries the girl who has joined his little troupe as assistant and who believes her husband to be the genuine article. Things seem sitting pretty. Then—Sylvia discovers his feet of clay.

For her sake he quits the life he's been leading and becomes a brush salesman.

Not so good...!

On a day when more doors than usual have been slammed in his face he runs into the chap who had been his man Friday before the great reformation, and who is now chauffeur for a pair of uptown married couples. Husband and wife pay Frank well to keep their respective secrets, and Chandra's old college chum, who knows his Riverside drive residents and their servants and is full of information he can pass on or keep under his hat—which ever pays the best—urges his friend to go a-Chandra-ing again with himself as side partner.

So Chandra chandras, unknown to Sylvia. She is told that the sudden influx of money and comforts is due to her husband's promotion at the brush factory. Traffic circumstance is to reveal to her that the popular, successful and home wrecking charlatan, Dr. Munro, is the man to whom she is married.

No more of the very interesting story here.

"The Mind Reader" has been accorded capital production and action and dialogue snap from start to finish. (Wish I had a dollar for every time I've said "start to finish.") Not a moment's dullness in the whole show. Plenty of excitement, plenty of suspense, plenty of laughs, and a lot of good acting.

See you tomorrow.

MINUTE MYSTERY
CAN YOU SOLVE IT?
BY H. A. RIPLEY

(Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.)
Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clue necessary to solve the mystery is in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

CLASS DAY.
"Good morning, fellows," smiled the professor as he stepped into the class room. "Feeling fit, are you? Splendid! We have some laboratory work to do on photo-micrography, but before getting to that I want you to sharpen your wits a bit."

"You chaps remember me telling you of the garrulous Mr. Crosscut whom I met on a recent ocean crossing, don't you? Well, there was something else interesting about that trip that just occurred to me."

"The line on which I sailed operates between New York and Liverpool. Each morning a boat leaves New York for Liverpool and at the same time a ship leaves Liverpool for New York. The trip each way takes exactly one week. I sailed from New York on Sunday, Jan. 8. On going aboard I was introduced to the skipper, Capt. John Gaspard, and a fine seaman of the old school he was."

"After chatting with him a few minutes he suddenly said, 'I've caught quite a few gentlemen on this, professor, and I'd like to see how long it will take you to get it: HOW MANY BOATS OF THIS LINE WILL WE PASS BEFORE WE DOCK IN LIVERPOOL?'"

"I'm not telling you chaps how long it took me to get it, but I'm giving you just one minute. Quickly now!"

How many boats of the same line did Fordney pass before his arrival in Liverpool?

[See solution on page 34.]

The above was sent to Prof. Fordney by W. W. Breitenstein, Chicago.

Perhaps you have a story or problem you would like to submit to him? If so send it to the professor in care of this paper. He will be delighted to receive it.

New Raincoats Make Downpour a Style Event

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Are you struggling with April showers or are you snug and dry and very swanky in some of the newest ideas of raincoats that are anything but the utilitarian affairs they are called? Even the slickers have departed... it's as much a task to dig up a shiny, crude looking old fashioned slicker as it is to successfully resist these snappy new things.

One shop is greatly exactly over a white rain ensemble... and it is a honey. The long, swag coat made with tailored lapels, pockets, snug fitting standup collar and a belt is of stunning rubberized crepe, a crepe that looks exactly like thick, heavy, expensive silk crepe de chine. It is feather-weight, tailored faultlessly and is a knockout for any shopper.

A clever hat, also of the same light stuff is made to look like a chic Paris chapeau... the crown is made of intricately cut sections, and the brim is a modest little affair to protect the eyes and face becomingly. The third member of the ensemble will make you green with envy until you can hang it in your own wardrobe... it's a perfect umbrella of white crepe, rubberized to match the coat and hat... it has transparent crystal ribs and a handle top with a white loop to slip over the wrist. The handle proper is a hide-away for a pair of toe rubbers, although you would never guess it until the obliging salesperson divulges the secret. Silvery gray snakeskin forms the hollow handle and a clasp holds the rubbers in concealment. This sprightly idea is about the smartest invention of the year. And the trio itself is a complete knockout in white. Other colors can be had with shade of deep ivory and an alluring alternative for the chalk white model.

Other raincoats worthy of great ballyhoo are the fine, fuzzy angora styles. The outside to be used for sunshine is of good looking plaids and soft blurred check designs in wool angora, while the inside is of soft, flexible rubber. At the first sign of rain you can turn the things wrong side out and become one of the best dressed rainy day shoppers.

Returning to the rubberized crepes, you will be glad to know that several styles of coats are available, the caped model being the most interesting next to the simply designed great coat type with pockets and belt.

You need no longer hide under the shapeless folds of a plucky looking raincoat... trim, slim models in all kinds of new styles and colors that rival the silhouettes of any afternoon coat of wool, are yours for the finding... and what a difference they are going to make on a dull and rainy day.

Spring Show of 7 Painters Wins Praise

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

An extravaganza of painting is the Spring Exhibit by Seven Painters which opens today in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue. Perhaps the effect is gained by the slight overcrowding of the walls, though we prefer to think that its effective qualities are due to the brilliance of the individual canvases. The paintings are, for the most part, large in size, striking in gesture, and engaging in color.

If any two painters walk away with the show they are Walter Krawiec and his wife, Harriet Krawiec. Their progress in technique and manner has been matter for recognition during the last several years. Today their achievement places them at the head of any important group of painters no matter where found. Mr. Krawiec has become particularly interested in the possibilities of the circus as painting material. Mrs. Krawiec concerns herself with flowers and still life arrangements. Both artists are magnificently represented in the current show with characteristic canvases. Fighting fires is Mr. Krawiec's second string and his several stirring scenes of engines, horses, and rubber coated men are thrilling.

Sharing the wall is Frank V. Dudley. The composure of his technique is emphasized by the dash of the Polish pictures. Dudley presents in beautiful fashion the dunes and Lake Michigan. Across from these paintings are the charming flower studies and landscapes by Josephine Reinmann and the atmospheric and rather breathless Chicago street and river scenes by Sam Avery. Mrs. Reichmann surprises us again by the freshness of her color and the attractive originality of her design. Her potted plant against its blue background is exquisite.

Water colors in a modern vein, rather vague as to goal, but intensely purposeful, by Thomas Hall, occupy most of the little gallery. Two whimsical scenes by Sam Avery are smile-provoking.

The exhibit is by all odds one of the best in town.

Use Wagon for "Back to Beer" Party

All Star Cast Presents South Shore Follies

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Old King Gambrinus may have contributed generously enough to the general jollification last night at the South Shore Country club, but without benefit of beer a 90 star cast romped through a performance of the South Shore Follies that hasn't been equaled in a dozen previous editions.

Close to 1,000 members and guests called for one curtain bow after another and then with the rollicking finale, "Polish Your Glasses and Bring Out the Steins," filed into an old fashioned German palm garden where the glasses had already been polished and the steins brought out. Tonight a second audience will follow suit.

The club's solarium, grill, and main dining room had been transformed into the palm garden and there was plenty of the foaming new 3.2 per cent beer.

Morrison C. Wood, chairman of the follies committee and one of the leads in the show, had at his table for the midnight frolic Robert Van Aletyne, who wrote especially for the production the "stein" song and "Your Chicago, My Chicago," the finale to the first act. Mr. Van Aletyne was contrasting these with his first best seller, "Under the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," and Mr. Wood was recalling the first South Shore Follies back in 1920 by way of a dog eared program of that show.

Mr. Wood is the only one of the first follies cast still playing. This time he's at his best in the Hunt club scene, a colorful act with red coats and green jackets, and that striking pair, Harriet Henneberry and Florence Orr, as the club entertainers. Wearing gowns of a delicious shade of pink fashioned in velvet and chiffon, Miss Henneberry and Miss Orr float across the stage in a dance.

Mr. Wood is responsible for one of the best bits in the follies. It's the last number labeled "It's Great to Be Married," an adaptation from a similar act in "The Cat and the Fiddle." In the leads are Mrs. Morrison C. Wood and E. Malcolm Anderson. With the exception of this act the show is the work of John T. Hall.

The curtain goes up this year on a dressing room with Jiddy Essinger, Jeanne MacGregor, Margery Hogan and a half dozen more chorus girls ready for the finishing touches. Albert J. Bates Jr. is the villain. Beth and Mrs. Bates, who are old timers in the follies, have leads in this year's show.

Other acts are "Moaning Becomes Electra," five hours of drama in one minute, and the acrobatic stunt of Mr. Anderson and Walter Haynes. The show owes a lot to its dancers. There's Virginia Hall Johnston in her "dance moderne," a Germanic interpretation done with Charles Thomas. Marie Elgren, a lovely brunette, and Lois Russell Holman, who has the lead in "Jumping Jacks"... and the Maehle twins, Lois and Jean. For its songs the show depends in large part on John Goehst, who sang in the Service club show last fall; Jean Stevenson, and Jean Dodge.

Attractive Dress Is Cut with New Long Waistline

WOMAN'S DRESS.

The long waistline of this charming dress is kind to the hips of the mature figure. The sleeves are interesting with an upstanding flounced ruffle placed above the rather deep fitted cuff. The wrapped buttoned closing of the bodice is another chic detail. Rough silk crepes will make up well in this design.

The pattern, No. 3188, comes in sizes 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch material with 1/2 yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Shubert Buys Back Theaters at Court Sale

New York, April 7.—[Special.]—Lee Shubert, one of the country's prominent theatrical men, regained today his theaters and other property which last year went into the hands of receivers.

He reacquired the property for $400,000 at a public auction held at the county courthouse. The purchase of the Shubert properties and other assets, including promissory notes, scenery, equipment and capital in numerous stage productions, was made in the name of the recently organized Select Theaters Corporation, Inc., of which Lee Shubert is president. William Klein vice president and treasurer, and M. R. Weinberger secretary.

The bid, which was the minimum allowed under the conditions of the auction, was the only one submitted. A certified check for $400,000 bound the sale, which will be reported to Federal Judge Francis C. Caffery for confirmation next Wednesday afternoon.

The sale was conducted by Earl A. Barnes, special master. Mr. Klein, who submitted the $400,000 bid, said that a list of the stockholders of the new corporation would be announced in the near future.

Twenty-eight theaters, nine of them in New York, were included in the sale.

Engagement of Betty Dixon to A. Parker Bryant Announced

Young Couple Are Now Visiting His Parents in Florida;
No Wedding Plans Made.

BY JUDITH CASS.

"MR. AND MRS. HOMER L. DIXON announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty, to A. Parker Bryant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Bryant of Northamptonshire, England," reads the formal announcement sent to this department by Mr. Dixon yesterday. It tells the most important facts, but there are many more of interest that aren't included in this terse, formal announcement, such as that the young engaged couple are now visiting his parents in Lake Worth, Fla., where they have a house for the winter.

The announcement isn't much of a surprise to their friends, for Mr. Bryant has been one of Miss Dixon's most devoted beaux for some time and last winter it was noted that he seemed to be the favored one. His parents, who have lived in England for more than a decade, came to Chicago for a visit with Mrs. Bryant's sister, Mrs. A. Watson Armour, last fall, and brought with them their "sub-deb" daughter, Harlowine. After a short visit here they went to Lake Worth, where they have been ever since, and they plan to go directly to New York from there to call for home the last of this month.

The date for Miss Dixon's and young Mr. Bryant's return from the south is not set yet, but her family thinks she will be at home some time next week. The Bryants have another daughter, Elizabeth, now Mrs. Lorena Bathbone of England. Parker Bryant has lived here for several years and before Sidney Heyworth Heaps' marriage this winter to Virginia Skinkle, the two young Englishmen shared an apartment on North Michigan avenue. Miss Dixon is one of six children, five girls and a boy, and she is the next to the eldest. She attended Dobbs Ferry and then spent a year at Vassar and made her debut in the winter of 1929-30. Her next younger sister, Ethel, was a debutante last winter. No plans for the wedding have been made.

Son Born to H. B. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Smith are the proud parents of a son, born yesterday morning at St. Luke's hospital. Mrs. Smith is the former Polly Hart, daughter of the H. Stillson Hart, and her marriage to the son of the Harold C. Smith of Lake Forest took place last June at the Hart's beautiful Barrington estate.

We just heard yesterday that Hayden B. Harris had been presented the Legion of Honor decoration by Rene Weller, the French consul, at a small dinner at the Harris residence on Cedar street Thursday night. Mrs. Harris had rushed home from New York to be present at the occasion, which also was a birthday party for Mr. Harris. "He always has been a great friend of France" was the reason Mrs. Harris gave for her husband's receiving the decoration; probably if we had asked the French officials we would have received a more explicit answer, but it would have meant the same thing.

At the dinner were Mme. Weller, M. and Mme. Arthur Allais (he is president of the Alliance Francaise), M. Grimm-Provence and Robert Hall McCormick. Mrs. Harris, who went to Miami early in February, spent ten days in Washington and New York on her way home with her daughter, Valeria, who is a student at Mount Vernon.

Tonight Mrs. Frederick M. Schmidt's living room will present a charming picture of the romantic days of "Merry Widows" if all Miss Dorothy Schick's guests come in costumes of that period as she has requested. She has named the dinner that she is giving for Miss Helen Tiekens and Maurice Patrick Garaghty a "Reunion in Vienna." About 25 of the closest friends have been invited to toast them tonight, and these will probably be among those present at the wedding reception after their marriage next Saturday.

Practically all the nations of the world will be represented at the Chopin Memorial fund concert to be given tomorrow afternoon at 8:30 o'clock in the ballroom of the Drake hotel for most of the foreign consuls plan to be present. Mrs. Charles S. Dewey is chairman of the reception and patronesses committee and is giving a small luncheon before the concert at her State parkway residence. She reports that hundreds of tickets have been sold and that she thinks the affair will be one of the outstanding ones of the season.

Egon Petri is to give the program after which Polish tea will be served. Petri and his wife arrived yesterday and are the guests of the C. Barney Goodspeeds in their Lake View avenue residence during their stay in Chicago. The Goodspeeds entertained at dinner for them last night.

Titus Zyzanski, the Polish consul general, who arranged tomorrow's concert, is going to Washington next week to see Stanislaus Patek, the Polish ambassador, and make plans for the latter's visit to Chicago in May.

Mrs. Dewey Will Give Lecture.
"French Ambassadors I Have Known" will be the subject of a talk to be given by Mrs. Charles S. Dewey on Thursday afternoon April 20, in French at the causerie of the Alliance Francaise. Mrs. Dewey has lived

The Changeling Bride

By Martha Ostenso

SYNOPSIS

The Hendersons—Meryl and Margaret, sister, and Andrew, the father—have lived for twelve years in a fishing settlement on the shore of Lake Superior after losing their fortune in Chicago. Andrew went to work after the death of his wife, Great Aunt Letitia, formerly dean of a girls' school in Ohio, in the lull between the Hendersons and a cultured past. Flint and his friend, Ned Bremer, hope to build up a great export business. Ned is in love with Meryl, but she dreams of a better future. A forest fire brings Blake Lawrence, injured and lost, to the Henderson cottage. There were two great games in nearby Agate Bay and its environs—Lawrence and Green. Blake is in love with Green's wife, Christine. Blake's broken ankle keeps him two weeks with the Hendersons. Meryl falls in love with Blake. Though still enamored of Christine, Blake becomes engaged to Meryl and sends for his sister, Theresa, to meet her. Blake leaves immediately after the ceremony for one of his mines where a strike is on. Lucia, a selfish cousin of the Lawrence, pays them a visit. She has some of her friends in for dinner. Lucia becomes jealous of the attention one of her male guests forces on Meryl and in anger tells Meryl that Blake married her as an escape from Christine. Meryl prepares to return home. Theresa persuades her to stay for six months for Blake's sake, whom she still loves, and not to hurt her people. Theresa promises to teach her social service work. Blake returns home and hears from Theresa the trouble Lucia has caused.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

THE GAMBLING INSTINCT.

Before Meryl could evade her Lucia had kissed Meryl's cheek, quite as though Lucia were the one granting the pardon. It had all been rather sickening, but Meryl had smiled calmly and said nothing.

She found Theresa seated at her long table, her manuscript spread out all about her.

"Well, young lady," Theresa said, with mock severity, "are you ready to begin work?"

"Any time you say," Meryl replied with a cheerful smile.

"That's better," Theresa said. "If you really want to you may do a little reading on case work during the few days we shall stay here before going back to town."

"I'd like to," Meryl said. "When shall we be leaving?"

"Blake has a directors' meeting in the city in ten days. We'll have to leave in time for that. And I want to get this stuff finished before I go. By the way, Blake liked your little dress."

"That's something," Meryl observed.

Christine was on the telephone, Theresa said.

"In fact, you made quite a hit with him this morning," Theresa went on. "He came in and talked with me before he left."

Meryl sat down in a chair beside the window and looked out at a swirl of dead leaves that the wind was sweeping along under the stone hedge.

"I really felt sorry for him," she said quietly. "Perhaps I should have."

"Don't begin that way, my dear," Theresa admonished her. "Most women spend the best part of their lives feeling sorry for some man who doesn't know how to appreciate it."

The maid came to the door and called Theresa to the telephone. Meryl sat at the window and watched the leaves eddying along the ground. She had found it very easy, she thought, to make decision last night, impelled by a wounded pride. It had not been so easy to abide by them this morning, in Blake's presence. She had seen the twinge of the pain cross his face when he had borne down too heavily on his ankle. She had almost relented then. If he had only spoken one word of love to her—but that, of course, was out of the question. She did not want him to speak any such word until he knew that he loved her and her alone. She knew, however, that she would not.

"Christine was on the telephone," Theresa said presently, as she entered the room again. "She and Lucia have had one of their cory little chats, I imagine."

"Naturally," Meryl said. "I expect I shall develop into something of a sensation."

"Well, we may as well get used to it, my dear. We'll be seeing a good deal of Christine, one way or another. We belong to the same set."

"I suppose it's unavoidable," Meryl said.

"Quite. All in all, I think it's better that we should—for your sake, as well as for Blake's. Anyway, she phoned to tell me that the Greens are leaving for the city tomorrow. They'll be leaving as soon as Julius comes in from the mills. She was sorry, of course, that she couldn't get over last night, but she promises a dinner party for you and Blake as soon as we move into town."

"A dinner party!" Meryl exclaimed. She felt her heart sinking within her.

"But—of course, my dear!" Theresa said with a dry smile. "The grand gesture, you know. And she'll carry it off very well, I promise you. She will have had a couple of weeks to pull herself together before then."

Meryl sighed. "Well, I suppose I'll have to go through with it," she said, "but I'm beginning to feel that I haven't much of a sense of humor."

Theresa laughed. "You have nothing to be afraid of, dear," she said firmly. "We'll get some stunning clothes for you and I'll venture to say you'll knock 'em all cold. As for your sense of humor, child, that is something we all develop—like senility—if we live long enough. All one needs is a little of the gambling instinct—and I know you have that."

"Maybe," Meryl replied; "but I'm afraid I'm not a very good loser at heart."

Theresa laughed sympathetically. "None of us are," she said. "But let's go and see what there is for luncheon."

The week passed somehow. It was a week of rehearsal for Meryl and Blake; a week in which they learned, line perfect, the parts they were to play in the drama at which Theresa and old Uncle Tom Lawrence were to be shamelessly diverted spectators. Lucia, to the relief of all, had taken herself off to the city on the day of Christine's departure. At dinner each night there were the polite, friendly inquiries as to the affairs of the day. Afterwards, there was always the hour of bridge, while the radio brought them music from Minneapolis or Chicago or New York. Then each went his separate way, Theresa to work upon the manuscript of her new book, Uncle Tom to lose himself in detective stories, Meryl to pore over the tomes on family case work which Theresa had given her to read. Blake either retired to the library or went to the home of Fred Ingalls, his business partner, who lived on the other side of Agate Bay.

One crisp afternoon Theresa drove Meryl out to spend a few hours with the Hendersons in Singing Cove, and invited the family to dinner on the last evening of the Lawrence's to spend in Agate Bay before returning to the city for the winter.

Both occasions were marked by quiet pleasantness, except for a slight ripple which Theresa observed in Meryl's equanimity on the evening of the Hendersons' visit. Blake had taken Flinty into the library after dinner where they had remained cloistered for some time. When they emerged at last Flinty's bronzed countenance was beaming irresistibly. Meryl, faintly hostile for the first time, asked what all the mystery was about.

Blake smiled down at her and told her that he and Flint had formed a little business partnership which was to include her old sweetheart, Ned Bremer. The business was to be conducted on a very modest scale at first, he assured her. If things went well there was reason to hope that Flint would some day be in charge of a highly successful shipping concern operating from the end of the lakes. Flint was so excited that he was able to contribute little to the conversation.

Theresa, watchfully alert from her chair, where she had been discussing modern education with Aunt Letitia, listened to the discussion of the new plans and observed Meryl's defensive withdrawal. She observed, too, the girl's heroic effort to treat with generous enthusiasm Blake's magnanimity toward her brother. When she saw Meryl finally throw her arms around Flinty and wish him luck, she knew, from the look in the girl's eyes, that Blake had succeeded only in antagonizing Meryl by that simple gesture of investing Flinty in a moment with a power which might otherwise have been forever denied him.

But through the days that followed Meryl never mentioned the subject of Flinty's ambitious plans again.

MARY MEADE PRESENTS:

BAKED PRUNE COQUETTES

Which Burst With Goodness

Select large prunes for coquettes. Wash them, place in a saucepan, cover with lukewarm water and soak over night. Simmer in this same water until nearly tender. Then drain off the juice and when the prunes have cooled, pit them. Now in the center of each place a pecan and half of a marshmallow, closing the prune neatly over the filling. Pour a little of the prune juice into the bottom of a casserole or baking pan and tuck the prunes snugly together in the bottom with their split sides up. Place in a moderately slow oven (325° F.) and bake for five minutes. Chill the prunes in the baking pan and then serve with the prune juice which should have been slightly sweetened and boiled down if it seemed too thin.

Clip on the dotted line, mount on a card; mounted, the recipe just fits the new Mary Meade Recipe File. If you haven't one of these files, you may obtain it (containing 133 delightful recipes) at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn Street, Price 25 cents. By mail, 34 cents.

this morning. "Why is it," she asks, "that the French dressing I make at home, no matter what recipe I use, is thin and runny, while store-bought French dressing is rich and creamy?" Here's the answer: In the first place, the thickness of an oil dressing like French dressing or mayonnaise depends upon the success we have in getting an "emulsion"—that is, a fine breaking up of the oil into particles, each little globe of fat held apart by a thin film of vinegar or lemon juice plus egg, starch, condiments or whatever your "emulsifying" or thickening ingredient is. In French dressing this ingredient is the mixture of condiments—the salt, paprika, mustard, or whatever is used. The more of these ingredients there are, the more creamy and the more lasting will be our "emulsion." The average home recipe uses only a little

Time of game—3 p. m.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
The White Sox rode home yesterday on the crest of the beer wave, threatening for their first win of the liquid gold and a win at the Cubs, which is scheduled for Comiskey park today as the opener of a two game 1933 preview. It will be the last half of a spring city series started at Los Angeles several weeks ago. Each team has won one game to date.

On the theory that the work will help him and because he is the prize member of the staff, the redoubtable Ted Lyons will be asked to pitch to the Cubs this afternoon. Only one thing will keep the Louisiana bachelors out of there. That will be extreme bad weather. In that event Ed Durham, the former Boston Red Sox right hander, will be given an opportunity to throttle the Cubs as easily as he did the powerful Pirates a few days ago. Charley Grimm, the Cub boss, plans on starting Guy Bush.

Homecoming Is Quiet.
The homecoming of the Sox was quiet and orderly, as might be expected of a team which has spent years in the company of the also rans. But it may be a bit different in the near future. The 1933 edition, from an all around standpoint, is certainly potentially stronger than anything since the boys went bad in the world series of 1919. They'll not win the pennant, as was predicted for them by one bold scribe, but barring bad luck, they'll win enough to prove that President Lou Comiskey knew his business when he traded a large bank roll for Al Simmons, Jimmy Dykes and Mule Haas.

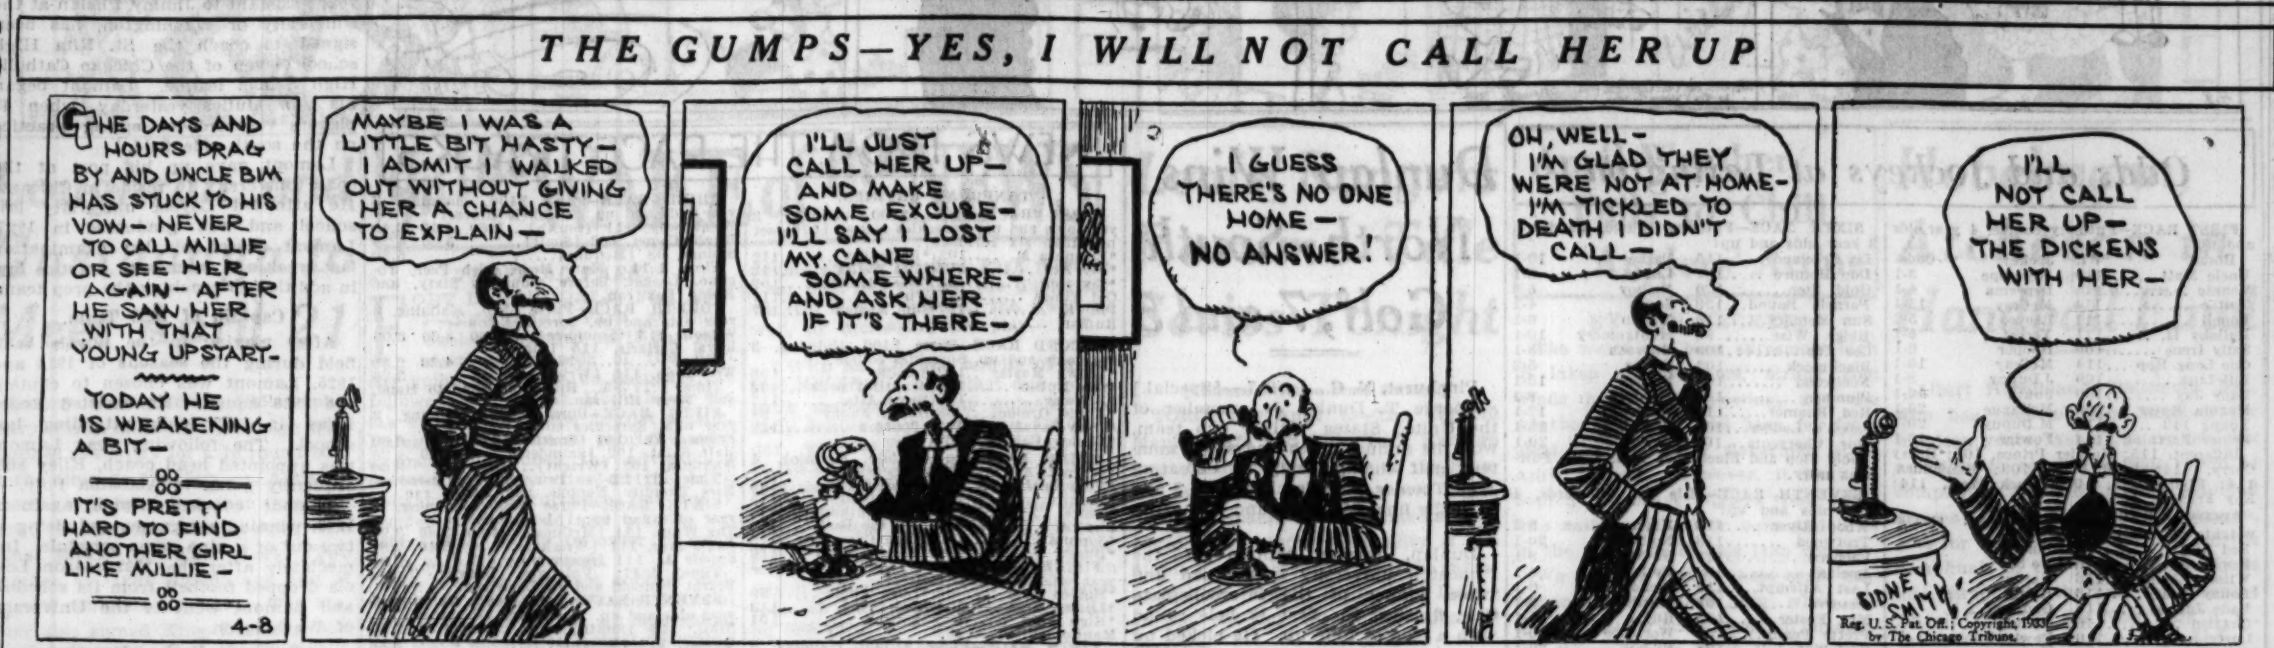

At present the team isn't exactly clicking, but a few games will adjust some of the difficulties. Mule Haas is a bit slow getting his bat to swinging in the proper groove. Simmons will start hitting them at an early date, if not today or tomorrow. Some of the pitchers still are doubtful quantities and much depends on their future conduct. The shortstop job still is both elusive and may be solved only by the selection of Hal Rhyne. Manager Fonseca needs a little more practice on drives toward first base, a berth he remained away from last season. But as a whole the team may hit fairly well, and that will offset some of the defects.

Dykes Is a Hustler.
One Sox member against whom no complaint can be lodged is Dykes. He's along in years as ball players go, but not lacking in needed qualities. He was hustling the day training started, and he'll be the same when the last game is played next fall. His steady fielding will be a rare treat for the Sox fans, who last season saw third basemen come and go almost daily. Dykes isn't a high average hitter, but a fellow always dangerous when men are on the bases. Incidentally, Mr. Dykes is the team's best barber. Talks from morning to night between puffs at fat, black cigars. Charley Berry runs him a close second in the barber circuit.

Mule Haas really isn't what his name indicates, although Dykes, his roommate, insists it is appropriate. The Mule tag was hung on him when the Pirates, who first owned him, sent him to the Southern association. In his first appearance he hit a homer. A sports writer mentioned that the wallop had the power of a mule kick. So the "Mule" remained, and he now uses it as part of the signature he applies to baseballs or programs. Half of Haas' fun in life comes from trailing Dykes and attempting to break up the pudgy veteran's speeches.

Simmons Walks Main Streets.
Al Simmons, who at various times in his career has been pictured as a prima donna, isn't that way at all if you know him. He likes to go around and meet celebrities, not realizing the celebrities are glad to see him. Sleeps late, so late in fact that he frequently gets to the ball park just in time for batting practice. When he visits new towns he walks up and down the main streets to get an idea of what the places are like. Being Milwaukee born he naturally thinks beer is a tonic. He doesn't touch anything more violent. A lot of people think Simmons collects too many fluke hits, but opposing infielders will tell you that he hits a twisting ball which is devilish to grab.

The Sox, after the games with the Cubs today and tomorrow, will have two days for practice before proceeding to St. Louis Tuesday night for the season's opener there. Wednesday, whether the games with the Cubs, if postponed by bad weather either Saturday or Sunday, would be played on the off days hasn't been decided. After the St. Louis series the Sox go to Detroit before returning to Comiskey park for their home opening with the Browns April 19.

BABE HERMAN IS HURT SLIDING AS CUBS WIN, 10 TO 2

But He'll Be Ready for Sox Game.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., April 7.—The weather man today finally got around to the fine business of smiling on the Chicago Cubs. He was so generous that he not only permitted the Cubs to play the Kansas City Blues, but they were so warm that Lon Warneke, opening day pitcher, was afforded the opportunity to take a final workout for next Wednesday's Wrigley field premiere. The score was Chicago 10, Kansas City 2.

Warneke worked five innings, allowed five hits, and held the American association team scoreless. During the span that Lon performed the Cubs bore down in regular opening day style, making nine of their ten runs in the first four innings.

Babe Herman Hurt Sliding.
The first inning might have been tragic, for in scoring on an immense inside the park homer Babe Herman injured an ankle in sliding into the plate. Babe forthwith withdrew from the game, but examination revealed the injury was slight, and the skinny one will be ready to go against the White Sox tomorrow. Babe was relieved by McCarron, who did right well with three runs and three hits.

Guy Bush will pitch for the Cubs in the game with the White Sox tomorrow. The Cubs plucked themselves four hits and three runs in the first inning, the highlight being the great dash of Babe Herman, which ended in injury. Bill Herman beat out an infield bouncer to start the game. English tied to Kelly and Demaree forced Bill Herman. Babe Herman then drove a liner to the fence in left center. Demaree scored in a jog, but Babe had to step some to make the circuit. The Cubs slid into the plate he stayed down, causing a great rush of ball players who doubtless were mindful of what had happened to Kl Cuyler in a sliding accident not so long since. Babe finally got up and went to the dressing room under his own power. When the contest resumed, McCarron singled to right and scored on Grimm's double to left. Hartnett ended the inning with a foul to Treadaway.

Three More in Third.
It was three up and three down for the Chicagoans in the second, but the boys came right back for three more in the third. English doubled to left and stopped at third while Demaree was reaching first on E. Taylor's fumble. McCarron then caromed a single off Aaron Ward's bosom, English scoring and Demaree stopping at second. The runners moved up on Stephenson's sacrifice and scored on Grimm's single to center. Hartnett was called out on strikes and Jurgens forced Grimm.

The Cubs' third three ply cluster came in the fourth inning. Warneke opened up with a double off the far distant score board in left. Bill Herman fanned and English filed to Kelly, but Demaree again landed on an error by E. Taylor. Warneke stopping at third. McCarron singled to center, scoring Warneke and putting Demaree on third. After which Stephenson doubled to right, scoring Demaree and McCarron. Grimm filed to Kelly.

Warneke Walks Three.
The only inning in which the Blues failed to get a hit off Warneke was the fifth, the last one in which Lon worked. And in that inning the Blues loaded the bases. Niggeling, Ward and Mosolf walked, but the threat ended when Grimm made a nice galloping catch of Kelly's foul.

The Blues ended their goose egg row in the seventh at the expense of Richmond. Ward walked, went to second on an infield out and scored on Stephenson's single to left. Schino reached second on a wild pitch, but Kelly filed to Stephenson and Koenig threw out Monahan. McCarron got his third hit in the ninth, a double, and came home on Stephenson's second double and third hit. The Blues scored one in the ninth on a hit, two passes and a force play.

PRESENT RULES FOR BASKETBALL SATISFY COACHES

New York, April 7.—(AP)—Basketball leaders from every section of the country reported today that the game is in the most flourishing condition of its history as the annual three day convention of the National Association of Basketball Coaches continued its sessions.

So satisfied did the coaches appear with the rules as they now stand that aside from a movement toward unanimity of interpretation by officials and minor clarification changes there appeared little likelihood of any recommendations for further revision of the code at the coaches' rules committee meeting tomorrow.

Managers of Sox and Cubs to Speak Over Station W-G-N

Low Fonseca, manager of the Chicago White Sox, will be interviewed by Bob Elson, sports announcer, over THE TRIBUNE radio station W-G-N to night between 8:30 and 8:45. Tomorrow night Manager Charley Grimm of the Cubs will be heard between 9 and 9:15 o'clock.

HOUSE PASSES NEW YORK RACE BETTING MEASURE

Governor Approves Bill;
Now Up to Senate.

Albany, N. Y., April 7.—[Special.]—The legislative program to repeal the laws forbidding betting at horse race tracks in New York state was pushed through the New York assembly this afternoon and now goes to the senate for concurrence.

By a vote of 117 to 17 the lower house of the legislature passed the Wallace bill repealing sections of the penal law forbidding betting. The Pack bill repealing other sections previously had been passed.

The anti-betting law has stood on the statute books of the state since 1908, when it was enacted during the administration of former Gov. Charles Evans Hughes.

Would Impose Tax.
The program had the support of the jockey club and the various racing associations of the state.

A tax of 8 per cent would be imposed by the state on the gross receipts of the race meetings in New York. Of the $500,000 anticipated from this source, $250,000 is allocated to the support of county fairs.

A number of Democrats first opposed the Wallace bill, but then voted for it. They said they had thought it was a village bill.

Lehman Supports Bill.
Gov. Herbert H. Lehman has announced his support of legalized betting at race tracks as a revenue measure.

"I would not object to horse race betting if we could get some revenue from it," the governor was quoted as saying.

The measure gets around the constitutional prohibition of betting by striking out the section of the law which makes betting a misdemeanor and substituting a section permitting the better to recover his wagers through civil action.

OHIO GETS RACING.

Columbus, O., April 7.—[Special.]—Horse racing and pari-mutuel betting were legalized today in the state of Ohio when Gov. George White signed the horse racing bill. The tracks will be licensed and a tax will be levied on wagers. Under the act a state commission will govern racing.

SHIRES LEAVES BRAVES; TO SEEK BERTH IN MINORS

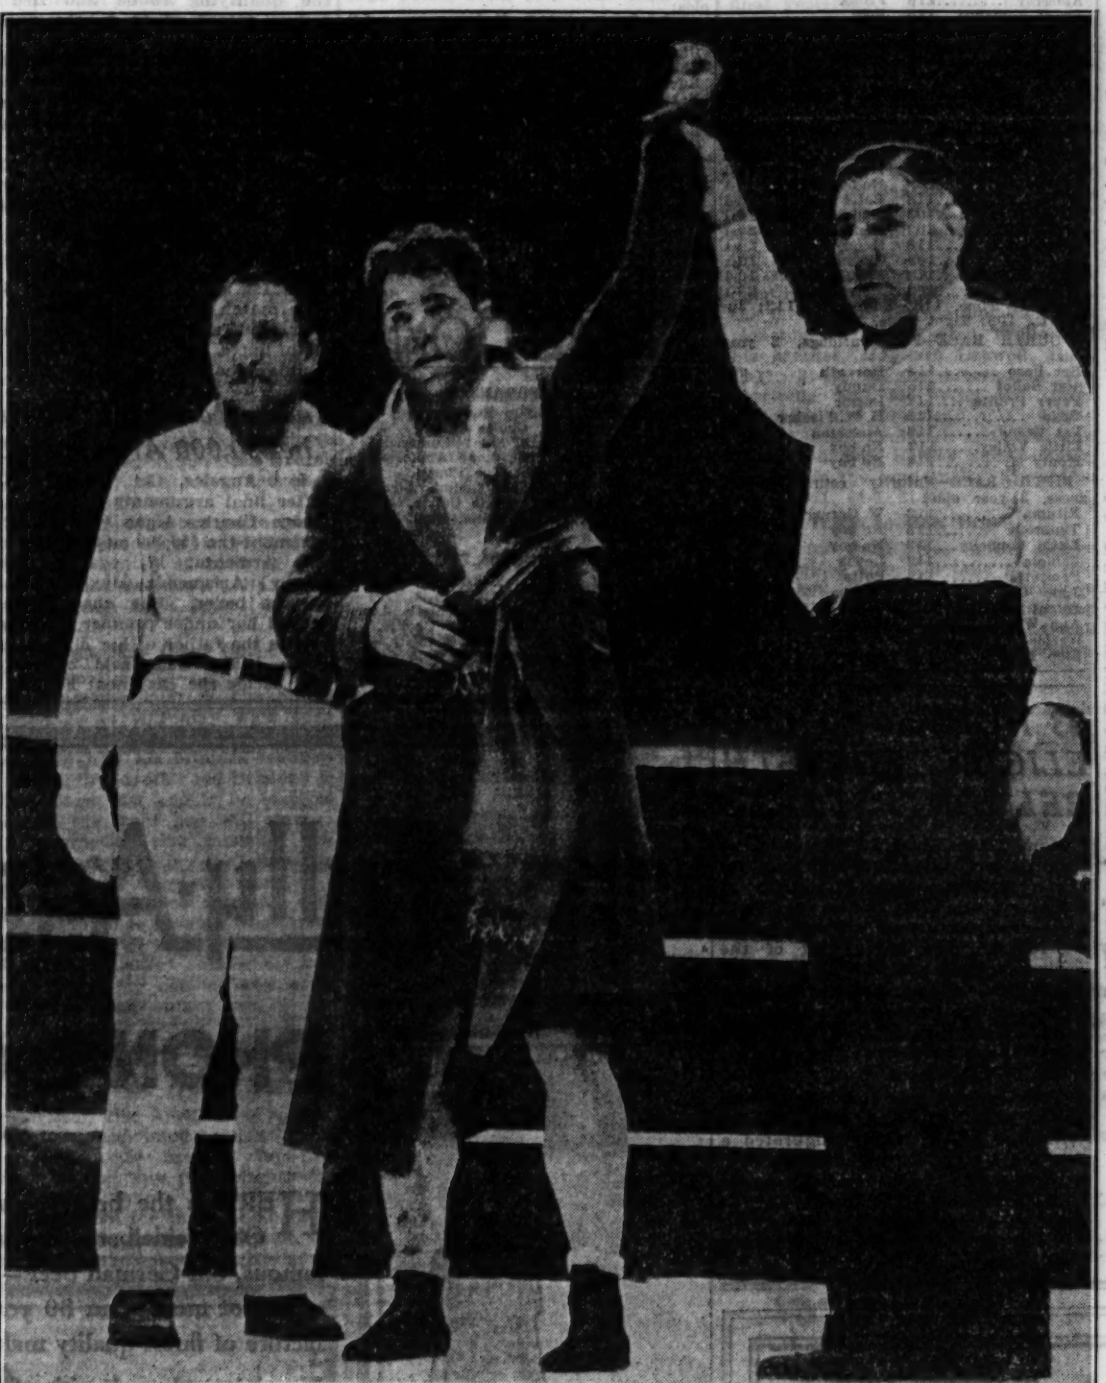

Boston, Mass., April 7.—(AP)—Art Shires, first baseman, has quit the Boston Braves according to advices from Manager Bill McKechnie, who made a hasty departure for Boston today when rain washed out the Braves' exhibition game at Newark.

Shires, unable to cope with Baxter Jordan for a regular berth, refused to accept the reduced salary offered him several days ago by President Emil Fuchs. McKechnie reported him as returning to his home in Chicago, where he will try to join a strong minor league club.

Shires came north with high hopes of landing a job with the Philadelphia Nationals, but they were dashed yesterday when Don Huest quit the hold-out ranks and came to terms with Manager Burt Shotton.

Shires injured his leg early last season and was put on the retired list. During his absence the Braves purchased Jordan from Baltimore and an immediate improvement in the team's first base play was noted. During their recent conference Fuchs gave Shires permission to place himself and his status, as far as the Braves are concerned, is that of a free agent.

THE WINNER—MR. SAVOLDI!

Referee Bob Managoff raises Joe Savoldi's arm as victor over Jim Londos in the wrestling match at the Stadium last night. Londos argued he was not pinned, but the referee declared both of his shoulders had touched the mat. The fall was recorded in 26 minutes 20 seconds. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Dempsey Gets Permit to Hold Bout on June 8

New York, April 7.—[Special.]—The state athletic commission today granted Jack Dempsey permission to hold the Max Schmeling-Max Baer heavyweight bout June 8, a week later than originally scheduled. At the same time the Garden announced that it would stage the Jack Sharkey-Primo Carnara championship bout at the Long Island bowl, June 15, a week after the Schmeling-Baer contest.

The commission, which earlier in the week adopted a resolution forbidding the Garden and Dempsey to hold their heavyweight bouts less than 20 days apart, deferred taking any action on the date set by the Garden. It was expected, however, that the Garden would be forced to delay the bout until later in the month or the first of July.

In giving Dempsey and Tim Mara, co-promoters, the June 8 date, the commission took away from the Garden a Thursday night date which already had been assigned the institution. Dempsey and Mara had been allotted Wednesday nights for the summer. The Schmeling-Baer fight will be held at the Yankee stadium, Dempsey announced officially.

Secret Marriage of Valparaiso Star Revealed

Valparaiso, Ind., April 7.—[Special.]—Announcement was made today of the secret marriage last July of Dorothy Bay, daughter of L. Clyde Bay, county road supervisor, to Gordon Duffner of Laporte, Ind., star tackle on the Valparaiso university football team.

3.2 O. K. for Cardinals; but Home Brew—No, Sir!

Joplin, Mo., April 7.—(AP)—Manager Charles (Gaby) Street will not penalize his St. Louis Cardinals who quench their thirst in the revived mode at Sportsman's park, St. Louis, after the ball games. "I'm not going to fine a player for drinking something the law says is nonintoxicating," Street explains, "but just let any of them try drinking home brew!"

Armour, Northwestern Game Postponed to May 1
The baseball game scheduled between Northwestern and Armour yesterday was called off because of cold weather. The teams will play the postponed game May 1. Coach Paul Stewart plans to play an interteam game today between the regulars and the scrubs at Roycemore, held in Evanston. It will be the only game for the Wildcats before leaving for their spring vacation trip next Thursday.

McMillen Throws Zaharias.
Results of the preliminary matches: Jim McMillen, 220, Chicago, threw George Zaharias, 235, Pueblo, Colo., with a croch hold in 20:28.

Joe Stecher, 225, Dodge, Neb., threw Lou Jennings, 212, Seattle, Wash., with a body scissors in 12:32. Gene Garibaldi, 215, Italy, threw Tom Marvin, 202, Okla., with a cross body hold in 16:40. Able Coleman, 205, Los Angeles, threw John Kalta, 240, Toronto, with a flying tackle in 13:55.

ON THE SQUARE
FANS WONDER

Winner Is Surprised

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.
The wrestling industry, which for years has not been regarded seriously by the sports public, devoted a new mystery before 6,800 at Chicago Stadium last night when Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football player, threw Jim Londos, claimant of the world's championship and popularly recognized as the greatest of present day wrestlers, in 26 minutes and 20 seconds.

The surprising outcome brought forth a variety of confusing and conflicting opinions from regular patrons. Many felt that Savoldi had double crossed his opponent. Others felt it was a gambling coup. Not a few predicted there now would be a rematch at Soldiers' Field before a larger gate. A few loyal Savoldi supporters claimed he was a better wrestler than Londos. There was no evidence to prove any of these assertions. Wrestling is that way.

Savoldi Breaks Jackknife Hold.
The climax of the match started in the 25th minute when they went to the mat and Londos applied the Japanese jackknife. This hold is a recognized wrestling grip and can be gotten only when the victim is on the floor, although as Londos explains it, one must get a wrist lock first, flipping the opponent on his back. As the men hit the floor the aggressor grabs the arm inside the elbow, and locks his legs over the bent arm, putting it in a vise. He pulls on the elbow to prevent the opponent from jerking the arm out of the vise formed by the leg scissors.

Writhing in the grasp of the jackknife hold, Savoldi rose up, taking Londos with him, and while the Greek heavyweight clung to his hold, Savoldi stood over him, standing Londos on his head and rolling his shoulders to the mat.

Referee Bob Managoff, once a heavyweight wrestler, tapped Savoldi on the shoulders, the official signal to stop. The men were near the ropes and Savoldi stepped back into a corner, apparently ready to continue, when Londos got up. When Managoff walked over to him to lift his hand in victory, Savoldi appeared to be the most surprised man in the stadium, unless it was Londos.

Londos got to his feet, stared around the ring to where his manager, Ed White, was mounting the steps to protest, and walked to his corner.

Managoff Leaves Early.
Immediately after Referee Managoff and Savoldi had posed for pictures the referee hurried from the stadium and rushed away in a taxi. He seemed anxious to get as far away from the scene of combat as possible. Members of the state athletic commission likewise left immediately and were not available for questioning after the sudden and unexpected termination of what was regarded as a certain London victory. Later Chairman Joe Triner, reached at his home in Oak Park, said the commission would make a thorough investigation and would have a statement to make Monday.

Referee Managoff was a heavyweight wrestler ten years ago. Since then he has refereed windup wrestling bouts here, alternating with Emil Thiry and Walter Evans. When not refereeing Managoff tends his variety store in the vicinity of Milwaukee and Grand avenues. He is an Armenian and is married. He has three children. He is about 35 years old.

The spectators, who paid $11.50, cheered long and loud for Savoldi when it finally dawned on them that he had thrown Jim Londos, the unconquerable.

Claim Title Not at Stake.
Londos and his manager, Ed White, stated after the match that Londos' title was not at stake. The Illinois athletic commission recognizes no heavyweight title claimants, but the National Wrestling association, the sport's controlling group in 18 states, concedes the title to Londos. The match was billed in the Stadium to advance publicity as for the championship.

Londos claimed that he was not on his shoulders, and that there was no count, as required by the rules. According to the rules, one must be held down for three seconds.

White will present a protest to the commission tomorrow. It was the first time in four years that Londos had been beaten. In the last three years only three men, Jim McMillen, Ray Steele, and George Zaharias had thrown him. In each case, however, it occurred in a two out of three fall match and Londos always won the match.

It seemed to have been no secret among the sporting crowd that Londos was going to be thrown, but the wise ones were silent until after Savoldi actually achieved his victory. All who professed to have had advance information said they had ignored the tip because such rumors are always prevalent before a London match.

2 DERBY HOPES RACE TODAY ON LEXINGTON CARD

Kentucky Track Opens
Two Week Program.

Lexington, Ky., April 7.—(AP)—Racing returns to Kentucky tomorrow with the Lexington meeting at the century old Kentucky association track, which will continue for two weeks with eight races daily.

Only two Kentucky Derby eligibles were entered on the opening day card. Red Roamer, nominee of the Lebus brothers, will match strides with a band of older horses in the day's feature, the Ben All handicap, a $1,000 purse for three year olds and upward over the Futurity course.

Long John in Eighth Race.

Long John, a gelding nominated for the Kentucky Derby by the Floyd brothers, is entered in the eighth race, a claiming affair for a $400 purse at a mile and 70 yards. Other nominees for the $50,000 stake to be raced at Churchill Downs, May 6, are in training here and will see action during the Lexington meeting.

Almost 1,000 horses are in Lexington for the meeting, far more than the capacity of the association track's stables. The overflow is being quartered at the trotting track and at horse auction barns in the city. Still others will be vanned from nearby thoroughbred farms and from Louisville for races later in the meeting.

Two Races for 2 Year Olds.

Two races for two year olds at four furlongs are on tomorrow's program in addition to the events for older horses.

PRINCESS VAL WINS TANFORAN FEATURE AT 20-1

San Bruno, Cal., April 7.—(AP)—Princess Val, a 20 to 1 shot, raced to victory in the San Leandro purse, feature race at Tanforan track today. Jockey Glen Smith closed Princess Val with a drive to win going away. The victor is from the stable of Mrs. A. K. West.

Time for the A. B. Spreckels course, 170 feet less than six furlongs, was 1:12 2-5. Half Saint was second and Nahanta third. Princess Val paid $43.60, $15, and $6.60.

ITALY DEPOSES BAIGUERA; GIVES CARNERA TITLE

ROME, April 7.—(AP)—The Italian Boxing federation conferred the heavyweight championship of Italy upon Primo Carnera today after deposing Innocente Baiguera, who now is in the United States, for fighting there without permission of the federation.

It was explained that the title was given to Carnera to allow him to oppose Jack Sharkey for the world's championship this summer. Carnera, in accepting the honor, promised to do his utmost to bring Italy its first world championship.

HIGH SCHOOL MAT MEET OPENS AT BARTLETT GYM

The University of Chicago high school wrestling championship tournament was opened at Bartlett gymnasium last night. Tilden Tech, winner of the Chicago High School league wrestling championship last week, is among the schools entered.

Dunlap Wins North-South Golf, 7 and 5

Pinehurst, N. C., April 7.—[Special.]—George T. Dunlap Jr., member of the United States Walker cup team, won the annual north and south amateur golf championship by defeating Jack Toomer, Florida champion, 7 and 5, in the final 36 hole round this afternoon.

Dunlap, former captain of the Princeton university golf squad and twice winner of the intercollegiate title, finished the first 18 hole round with a lead of four up. He picked up three more holes in the afternoon round and the match ended on the 31st green.

Accurate putting again brought Dunlap victory. He was medalist in the qualifying round and tied the course record of 84 in the quarter-finals.

Dunlap took the lead at the start, scoring pars on the first two holes, while Toomer three putted on each green. Dunlap went three up when he won the seventh. The 11th, 12th, and 13th holes went to Dunlap. Toomer scored a birdie three on the 14th and also won the 15th, but Dunlap took the 17th. The morning round ended with Toomer winning the 18th.

In the afternoon round Dunlap won the 21st and 22nd holes to go 6 up. The match was prolonged when Toomer sank a 12 foot putt to win the 30th, but a par four on the 31st gave Dunlap the hole and victory.

Judge Reserves Decision in $50,000 Arizmendi Suit

Los Angeles, Cal., April 7.—(AP)—After final arguments today Superior Judge Charles Haas took under advisement the $50,000 suit of Miss Frances Armenta, 17, against Alberto (Baby) Arizmendi, Mexican hantamweight boxer. She charges he betrayed her under promise of marriage and is the father of her six weeks old son. Judge Haas said he probably will decide the case next Friday.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
New York, April 7.—As forecast yesterday, the lowering of the New York federal reserve bank's discount rate resulted in a broad demand for United States government securities today and a higher price trend.

Interpreting the rate cut as concrete evidence of credit relaxation, both institutional and private buyers came into the market with increasing purchase orders. Commercial banks were heavy buyers. Short term treasury obligations continued to draw the bulk of demand, but long term issues were not neglected and showed a uniformly higher price trend.

Rails and Utilities Strong.
Corporation bonds shared in the demand for high grade fixed interest bearing securities, with numerous rail and utility shares, including large fractions. These were pronounced among utilities, including Brooklyn Union Gas, Chicago Gas Light and Coke, New York Telephone, and Pennsylvania Power and Light 4 1/2s, and others.

Responding to a 4 point rally in Chicago and North Western issues, following a stock exchange study of their recent slump, speculative rail road bonds forged ahead over a broad front. Gains appeared in Baltimore and Ohio 4 1/2s, Denver and Rio Grande 5s, Erie refunding 5s, New York Central 4 1/2s, New Haven consolidated 6s, and many others.

Speculative Bonds Rally.
A few speculative utility and industrial bonds, keeping pace with the uptrend of stocks, rallied a point or more. Such issues were Columbia Gas and Electric 5s, American and Foreign Power 5s, Keith Corporation first 6s, and Texas Corporation 5s.

German bonds steered an erratic course, rallying up to 3 points at the opening and then dropping sharply following the statement of the Reichsbank head intimating that a cut in the debt service may be imminent.

N. Y. Stock Exchange Seats Sell $1,000, $2,000 Lower

New York, April 7.—Continued dullness on the stock exchange was reflected today in the sale of two seats at declining prices. The first was sold at $4,000, off $1,000 from the previous sale, an 8th second at $3,000.

Packard Motor Car.

I would like to ask you for some information regarding Packard Motor stock. I intend to buy some at present low prices.—E. M.

Packard Motor Car company is one of the prominent manufacturers of higher priced automobiles. In 1932 the company offered a line of medium priced cars in an attempt to counteract declining sales and to capture some of the business attracted to lower priced cars.

The company plays an important part in the manufacture of gasoline and Diesel engines for marine and aviation uses.

As a result of reduced purchasing power of the dollar, the sale of cars sold by the automobile industry has decreased sharply, and major activity has been in low priced cars.

Packard's sales and net income have declined steadily during the last three years. Sales for 1932 were $15,616,000, just a little more than half of sales of $29,987,000 for 1931. Sales for 1930 were $6,824,000, against loss of $2,909,600 for 1931 and net income of $9,034,000, or 60 cents per share, for 1930. Net income for the four months to Dec. 31, 1932, was $4,725,000, against record net of $23,183,000 for the year ended Aug. 31, 1932.

Although losses have been incurred working capital, current position still remains strong. On Dec. 31, 1932, current assets were $20,450,000 and current liabilities were $23,325,000. Cash assets alone were more than $12,000,000. Working capital was $13,125,000, against $12,396,000 the year before.

Capitalization consists of 15,000,000 shares of no par stock. Transfer of $10,000,000 from capital stock account to surplus in 1932 resulted in a surplus of $8,298,000 at the close of the year. Had the transfer not been effected, profit and loss deficit would have been $1,602,000.

No dividends are being paid on the capital stock.

Insurance Mortuarium.

On Feb. 16 I surrendered two small policies to an Ohio insurance company and was promised a check by March 1. This I did not receive. They said that the bank holding the mortuarium prevented. How long do you think they can hold it up and when do you look for the restriction to be removed?

—D. W. G.

We are not the company you would not be permitted to make a payment to you in accordance with the surrender terms of your policy so long as the insurance mortuarium exists in your state. Negotiations are now in progress aimed at locating the insurance mortuarium restrictions and to make the terms uniform in the different states. It is impossible to say at this time when these aims will be accomplished.

AUDITORS TALK OF BEST WAY TO PROTECT PUBLICSay Reports Should Be Classified.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

With the memory of the public hanging on the failure of many enterprises which, apparently, possessed clean bills of health in the form of reports by reputable public accountants, members of this important profession are discussing methods which will prevent similar situations from existing in the future.

Differences exist among the accountants themselves as to the best procedure to be taken. While all are agreed that clear definite reports which can be read easily by the public are an important factor in correcting the evils of the past, there are a number of points on which accountants differ.

For example, some accountants hold that auditors should be elected by the stockholders of a corporation rather than to be selected by the officers. Others maintain that such procedure would make but little difference for even if the stockholders were to elect the auditors their control over them would be too loose to permit much good to result.

Essentials of Protection.

One leading accountant yesterday presented some of his opinions on measures to be adopted. He gave two essentials for the protection of the public in the presentation of reports of companies which are:

1. The audited report should be signed by the managing director of the company or corporation—usually the president—making it. This officer would accept full responsibility for the authenticity of the information contained in it. If it were proved that there was misstatement or information was withheld the officer signing the report should be liable to a prison sentence.

2. The type of audit should clearly be stated on the report signed by the accountants. Under the plan of the accountant interviewed yesterday there would be three general types of audits:

A detailed audit, a test audit, and an examination of the financial condition of a company as obtained from a scrutiny of balance sheets and other records.

Prevent Passing Buck.

Discussing the first point, the accountant said that the enforcement of responsibility for a report would stop any buck passing between officers of a company and the auditors. It would result in the punishment of delinquent officers such as occurred when in November, 1931, Lord Kylsant was sentenced to prison in England for publishing a false prospectus.

Regarding the second point—the type of audit—the accountant said that a detailed audit is not generally practical because of the huge expense it would entail. In the case of audits of huge corporations like General Motors such an audit might require a year to make.

The second type—the test audit—is that used in from 70 to 80 per cent of reports issued by standard corporations. It roughly follows the procedure outlined in a bulletin issued by the federal reserve board titled "Verification of Financial Statements." The New York Stock exchange now requires that reports submitted to it follow the procedure outlined in this bulletin. Adoption by the New York exchange of this form of report was described as one of the most important steps forward that has been taken for the protection of the public. It protects the accountants and ensures a proper report being made because it lays down the form in which it shall be returned. The accountant has no discretion in the matter and he cannot bow to the wishes of the corporation employing him.

The third type of audit is more superficial. It serves some purposes, but its scope should be so stated.

Tell Public What It Gets.

"The way out of our difficulties is to tell the public what it is getting in the way of audits," this informant stated.

He also said that one improvement in the presentation of annual reports of corporations to the public would be the inclusion of line by line comparisons of the results in the annual report with those of the preceding year. This would prevent withholding of important information. Another factor that the public should watch, he said, was the adoption by corporations of new methods of accounting practice without so stating in the annual report.

Sixty-five Year Pre-War Record of the Beer Business of the United StatesDebate Ways of Inflation
as Boom Rests

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The so-called "inflation boom," which has been pushing up prices in commodity and security markets since the end of the banking holiday, took another rest yesterday.

There was excitement on the Chicago Board of Trade as corn prices plunged suddenly downward 3 1/2 cents a bushel. The big buying wave of the day before was missing, and heavy offerings by traders seeking to take their profits found no buying orders. May corn dropped precipitously from 34 1/2 cents a bushel to 30 1/2 cents. The decline, however, was soon checked and at the close corn prices were only fractionally below Thursday's closing quotations.

September wheat futures penetrated into new high ground at 60 1/2 cents a bushel, but fell off later. At the close wheat prices were about at Thursday's closing levels.

Moody's index of 15 staple commodities yesterday stood at 88.5, compared with 88.9 on Thursday, 85.3 a week ago and 81.9 on March 3.

Stocks Follow Grain Market.

Stocks in New York and Chicago followed grain prices. Closing quotations showed little change from Thursday's final prices, despite early advances. Cotton and coffee prices were steady yesterday, and sugar was only slightly lower.

On the whole, prices stood up well in face of the profit-taking invited by the substantial advances during the last week. Volume of trading, however, was considerably smaller than on Wednesday and Thursday, with traders exhibiting a tendency to mark time until there were more tangible developments in Washington.

Along La Salle street, inflation continued to be the favorite topic of conversation yesterday. If inflation comes, Chicagoans are convinced that it will not come because of any present weakness in the currency of the United States. With a 73 per cent gold backing, this country's currency is stronger than that of any other important nation.

Deliberate Inflation Foreseen.

Any inflation that may be in store for the United States, it is agreed, will come as the result of a deliberate and premeditated plan.

In the past, in almost every country that has resorted to it, currency inflation has followed a succession of governmental deficits. Should the federal government spend on relief billions in excess of its income from taxes, the additional money could be supplied only by the printing presses.

That would be one way to inflate the currency. Another is that proposed early this week by the three hundred business leaders who call themselves the Committee for the Nation. They propose quick currency inflation to be attained by reducing the gold content of the dollar about 42 per cent.

Those who think inflation is coming are not disturbed about the lack of definite promise of inflation from Washington. They argue that the President could not be expected to announce in advance that he plans inflation.

Roosevelt Has Other Problems.

If the administration should put itself on record as favoring inflation, they argue, it would encounter more opposition in its program of reducing government costs, consolidating railroads, and extending mortgage aid to farmers.

Further, the argument goes, there are the impending war debt conference and the international conference on the dollar, particularly Great Britain, fear a cheapening of the dollar because it would enable American producers to compete to better advantage in world markets. This gives the Americans a threat to hold over the heads of other nations in these conferences.

Perhaps the strongest argument advanced by individuals who think there will be inflation is that the price level must rise in order to maintain public confidence in banks, insurance companies, and business as a whole.

GRAIN RATE QUIZ
MAY BE SHIFTED TO WASHINGTON

President Roosevelt's economy ax has struck the grain rate hearing which is being held before Examiners Arthur R. Mackley and George J. Hall of the Interstate Commerce commission at the Hotel Sherman. Mr. Hall received instructions from Washington stating that if the hearing could not be concluded before April 15 it was to be adjourned and reopened in the capital.

Shippers and railroad men objected to the Washington ruling, stating that it would be far more expensive to send and maintain their representatives in Washington than it would be in Chicago. They asserted in a message to the Interstate commerce commission that the additional expense to the government in continuing the hearing here would be slight compared with that entailed in adjourning it to Washington.

The suggestion was made that if the hearing cannot continue here beyond April 15, possibly adjournment could be taken to July 1, after which it could resume in Chicago.

Industrial Rayon Reports
$1.58 a Share for Quarter

Cleveland, O., April 7.—(AP)—The Industrial Rayon corporation today reported net profits for the first quarter of $229,370, after depreciation, federal taxes and all other charges. This equaled $1.58 a share on 144,299 common shares and left $72,150 available for surplus after meeting the 50 cent quarterly dividend.

Chicago Board Seeks to Apply
New Rules to Stocks on Its List

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Enforcement of the new listing requirements announced by the Chicago Stock exchange is being received from officials of companies with securities already listed, according to exchange officials.

The effectiveness of the new rules will rest to a large degree on the cooperation of the corporations with securities hitherto listed and exchange officials express gratification at the response received so far.

Clearer Reports Seen Certain.

Greater publicity for the financial affairs of the listed corporations through more detailed and clearer reports seems assured as a result of the exchange's campaign.

Corporations listing securities in the future will be bound by the new rules under their listing contracts. The exchange, with the support of public opinion, is asking the companies now listed to accept the new program.

CONGRESS MAY DELVE
OF MOTION PICTURES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 7.—An investigation as sweeping and far-reaching as any ever conducted into the affairs of any American industry was approved today by the house committee on rules when it voted to report favorably the Sweeney resolution for the investigation of the motion picture industry.

Under the resolution, the speaker is directed to appoint a committee of seven members with authority to sit anywhere in the United States and to inquire into every activity of the industry, including banking practices, production and distribution, and realty holdings.

In a preamble to the resolution, which was submitted by the committee, Mr. Sweeney alleged that various motion picture corporations have issued and sold securities throughout the United States directly or through underwriting agencies, and that a situation has developed whereby illegal control and restraint of trade are alleged to be practiced in the motion picture industry.

Furthermore, the argument goes, there are the impending war debt conference and the international conference on the dollar, particularly Great Britain, fear a cheapening of the dollar because it would enable American producers to compete to better advantage in world markets. This gives the Americans a threat to hold over the heads of other nations in these conferences.

Perhaps the strongest argument advanced by individuals who think there will be inflation is that the price level must rise in order to maintain public confidence in banks, insurance companies, and business as a whole.

Figures Show Improvement.

"The improvement of the last few weeks is beginning to be registered by statistics, as on the chart of industrial indexes the line for carloadings continues to rise, the average daily production electric power is higher, while commodities are steadier following the reaction of the week preceding, and steel production has turned upward, as a result of the heavier demand from automobile and brewing industries.

"Although the suspense created by the delay of the farm bill will tend to hold many plans in abeyance, trade generally is well geared to the future."

Expect Constructive Action.

The Business Week says in part: "We think too highly of the intelligence of President Roosevelt and his advisers to suppose for one moment that the administration believes it has done anything as yet toward reviving business—save perhaps the 2.2 per cent of stimulation that beer may give. To be downright frank about it, virtually everything done so far has been deflationary."

"Why, then, is the business world so hopeful? Just because we all believe the administration will not stop here; because the country has faith that the step thus far taken are but the preliminaries toward constructive action."

OFFICERS FIGHT
LIQUIDATION OF GLOBE-RUTGERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 7.—Officials of the Globe and Rutgers Fire Insurance company announced today they would oppose the appointment of a liquidator, requested in a petition filed in the Supreme court by State Superintendent of Insurance George S. Van Schaick. The petition will come up for argument next Tuesday.

Edwin C. Jameson, president, said plans will be pushed to rehabilitate the company on a basis which will give the maximum protection to the creditors and permit the company in due course to reopen business on a strong basis.

Van Schaick in the petition to the court stated that he considered that further efforts to rehabilitate the company would be futile, as he thinks there is little chance to obtain the funds necessary to accomplish this. He places the assets at $30,000,000 and the liabilities at $37,000,000.

7 MORE STATE
BANKS ARE GIVEN PERMITS TO OPEN

State Auditor Barrett announced last night that seven banks have been given authority to reopen today on an unrestricted basis. They are:

PLAN 2 BILLION
FUND TO BACK
BANK DEPOSITSNew Bill Asks U. S.,
Reserve Money.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 7.—A new banking bill containing a provision for a two billion dollar deposit guarantee fund is to be introduced in congress next Monday and pressed toward passage within the next week or ten days.

The measure will represent the second step in President Roosevelt's program to protect investors and depositors. The first step in the program was the securities bill prescribing full publicity and approval by the federal trade commission for all issues moving in interstate commerce. Third and last, will come a bill to regulate stock and commodity exchanges through restriction of the use of federal reserve funds for marginal trading.

The new banking bill, with its guarantee fund, represents a compromise between the views of Senator Carter Glass (Dem., Va.), who opposes any loosening of the federal reserve system's restrictions, and Chairman Henry B. Steagall (Dem., Ala.) of the house banking committee, an ardent advocate of government guarantee of bank deposits.

Based on Glass Bill.

The bill is to be based on the banking bill sponsored by Senator Glass which was passed by the senate during the last congress, but which died in the house because of Representative Steagall's opposition.

In addition to the deposit guarantee fund provision, the measure is to include provisions calling for far reaching changes in the country's banking structure. Among these will be the following:

1. Divorce of security affiliates with in two years.

2. Prevention of interlocking directorates between investment banking houses and industrial enterprises whose securities they handle.

3. Prohibition of payment of interest on checking accounts in federal reserve member banks and national banks.

4. Possible prohibition upon banks lending money to their own officers.

5. Authorization for statewide branch banking where state laws permit.

6. Increase of required capital for national banks from $25,000 to $50,000.

As now contemplated, the guarantee fund would be administered by a corporation with an initial $500,000,000 capital. Authority would be given to the corporation to issue bonds up to a total of $1,500,000,000 which would make the corporation's resources $2,000,000,000.

The federal reserve banks would be required to subscribe an amount equal to one-half of their surplus or approximately $150,000,000. The treasury would also subscribe $150,000,000, which represents a part of the earnings of the federal reserve banks paid into the treasury. Likewise, there

Woodin Must
on Debt Action

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 7.—Within the next few days Secretary of the Treasury Woodin will have to decide whether he wants to tackle immediately the refinancing of the largest outstanding issue of government securities, six billion dollars' worth of Fourth Liberty loan bonds.

The huge wartime issue, largest the treasury ever floated, becomes callable Oct. 15. Six months' notice must be given if the treasury wishes to refinance it in whole or in part, making the date for notice April 15.

Probably the date for notices will go by without Woodin taking any action, it was said. The major trend in government bond prices has been down recently and conditions generally are not favorable for refinancing.

The treasury has recently indicated that it might care for some of its refinancing through a popular bond drive, similar to the Liberty loan drive.

It is device, however, whether to use it is used at all, to refund some of the short term debt into bonds, it is thought.

If April 15 slips by without notices going out, six months will elapse before the treasury gets another chance to start the huge refinancing, which may involve a total of 11 billion 500 million dollars of the public debt before the year is over. The big wartime loan can be called only on its semiannual interest dates, which are April and Oct. 15.

When the refinancing begins, it will be done in several different operations, treasury officials predict. The government will not try to roll over the entire $6 billion at one time, but will call a part of the issue each year up to 1938, when it matures. The refinancing, therefore, must be mopped up within the next five years.

Beside this huge war-time loan, the treasury will have another 5 billion dollars worth of its public debt securities come due or callable during the present year. Altogether, the maturities of this year will amount to half of the outstanding debt.

The treasury announced today that the public debt reached 21 billion 342 million dollars at the end of March. A new 100 million dollar issue of bills which will increase the total to about 21 billion and a half, is now being sold.

INSURANCE MEN
SPLIT ON POLICY
LOAN HOLIDAYCommittee Named to Report Today.

Insurance commissioners of thirty-one states who are endeavoring to find a way to secure uniformity in the insurance moratoria in effect throughout the country late yesterday appointed a committee of five to work throughout the night on a plan for presentation when they meet again at 9 o'clock this morning. This came after the commissioners had held an all afternoon session behind closed doors at the Palmer house. Differences of opinion exist among the commissioners and the committee was given no instructions.

Members of the committee are G. S. Van Schaick, New York; Ernest Palmer, Illinois; Theodore Thumeyer, Wyoming; Merton L. Brown, Massachusetts; and Joseph B. Thompson, Missouri.

Hold Two Meetings.

There was an open meeting of the commissioners yesterday morning with representatives of various life insurance companies. After the noon recess the commissioners went into private session. Garfield W. Brown, insurance commissioner for Minnesota and president of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, presided at both meetings.

Mr. Brown stated that while differences of opinion exist, the general sentiment at the closed session was in favor of uniformity of regulation. As it now is each state has its own method of handling its own moratorium, with the result that the insurance companies are subject to a diversity of rulings.

A few of the eastern insurance companies are said to favor a general lifting of the moratoria on policy loans and cash surrender payments. Western companies and commissioners oppose this. Others hold that the insurance companies should be placed under a sixty day flat moratorium during which time weak companies would be weeded out in the same manner that the banking situation has handled.

Suggest Federal Control.

Unless the commissioners are able to agree among themselves as to the best way to handle the situation, it was suggested in the corridors of the Palmer house yesterday that federal control might be sought.

The meeting had hardly begun yesterday before it became apparent that the differences of opinion which have split the ranks of the insurance companies themselves likewise prevail among the insurance commissioners.

All seemed agreed that uniformity of policy was imperative, but there was no agreement concerning what that policy should be.

C. C. Greer, Alabama insurance commissioner, who has lifted the loan moratorium in his own state, argued that there is no legal basis for moratoriums on the fulfillment of these in-

The full banking and currency committee meanwhile continued its consideration of the administration's securities bill, and heard H. H. MacLean, vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank of Chicago, assert that the measure, as now drawn, might seriously interfere with the work of reconstruction.

Points Effects on Industry.

"The financing of industry depends in large part upon the activities of legitimate securities dealers," Mr. MacLean told the senators. "Unless dealers are permitted reasonable freedom of action and reasonable profit, a large amount of development work will be retarded."

Instead of requiring each separate issue of securities to be approved by the federal trade commission, the Chicago banker suggested a system of licenses for dealers in securities. The new bill, he asserted, would bring interstate commerce in securities to a standstill, and would impose almost insupportable conditions on the issue of foreign securities.

Nor did Mr. MacLean believe it would be fair to make the Crooks, Gottoliers and underwriters of securities issues responsible for losses by investors.

"No one," he said, "can afford to take this responsibility. Honest men would not risk their money. Crooks would put their property in the name of some one else."

CENTRAL WEST PUBLIC SERVICE ASKS REFUNDING

New York, April 7.—(AP)—In an effort to prevent foreclosure proceedings by holders of its first lien bonds the Central West Public Service company has prepared a plan of adjustment which it hopes the security holders are invited to participate. It was announced today.

The plan provides for an extension to June 15, 1948, of the maturity of $1,000,000 of $11,000,000 of 6 per cent bonds, Series C, due on Dec. 15, 1932. The annual return would thus be raised to 5 1/2 per cent on a yield to maturity basis. Scrip will be issued in exchange for at least one coupon on all first lien bonds, series B, and C.

It is also proposed to convert the unsecured funded debt, consisting of fixed interest bearing debentures and notes, into a preferred stock on which dividends shall be cumulative to the extent that they are covered by the amount of "net income available for the cumulation of preferred stock dividends."

ACCOUNTING FOR COLUMBIA GAS ASKED IN SUIT

Cincinnati, O., April 7.—(AP)—A stockholder of the Columbia Gas and Electric corporation filed suit for an accounting from directors of the company to which he had brought today, asserting that $41,816,377 had been paid to stockholders through mismanagement.

HAROLD TEEN-SEEING IS BELIEVING

UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES WILL YOU LEAVE ME—
YOU ARE TO CHAPERON
ME FOR A VERY GOOD REASON!

IF YOU DON'T MIND MY SAYING
ADMIRE YOU MORE IN A SWEET SHIRT AND CORRUPTORS!

MY ERROR,
MY DEAR
DIMPLES—
TEA TIME OF MAN!

OH, OH!
THERE'S LULLABIES!
I'M GONNA DUCK!

THEN IT IS TRUE—
OH, HAROLD!
HADN'T LIED
TO ME!

SH! HERE COMES
